Furs that are Worthy of Careful Consideration

Every piece of Fur placed in Stock this season has received the careful discriminating attention of experts, from the selection of the skin to the finish of touches. Accordingly absolute confidence can be placed in the quality of the Furs, the desirability of the Styles, the character of the workmanship. See the actual garments and examine thoroughly. To get a fair idea of where we stand in regard to Women's and Men's Fur Garments, compare prices and quality with those of any others. As we give best value in our regular business, so it follows that our special efforts are the more worthy of your consideration.

Ladies' Persian Lamb Jackets, 24 or 26 inches long made from choice selected skins, extra deep collar and facings, large new sleeve lined with best quality Broadcloth or Plain Satin, prices $75.00, $100.00, $135.00 and $175.00.

Men's Natural Coon Coats, first grade perfectly lined and finished, are extra special values as they were bought early, before the big advance in Furs prices $50.00, 60.00, 65.00 and 75.00.

Ladies' fine Near and Baltic Seal Jackets, new Blouse style, Collar facings and cuffs of Natural Canadian Mink, lined with best grade satin, Silk girdle at waist, takes an expert to distinguish from genuine seal, prices $40.00, 60.00 and 75.00.

Alaska Sable Muffs, Round and Coronation styles, special $10.00, 12.50, 15.00 and 18.00.

German Mink Stoles, beautiful looking and wearing Furs, $8.00, 9.00, 12.50 and 18.00.

German Mink Muffs, $4.00 and 5.00

Children's White Bear Skin Coats, pretty and stylish, ever so snug and warm, and a complete variety of styles to choose from, sizes 20, 22 and 24 inches.

AMHERST ISLAND FAIR,

Amherst Island Fair was held at Stella, on Tuesday last, under ideal weather conditions. The display of stock was the best in years and the display of fruits, vegetables, Ladies' work etc, was well up to the average. The ladies of the Church of England on the island, gave a dinner in the Victoria Hall, which was much appreciated. To the untiring efforts of Mr. W. H. Montry, the secretary of the Agricultural Society, and his able Committee, the success of the fair, is largely due.

New Floor Coverings and Draperies.

Doubt and hesitation are not factors in this business, already we've opened out many many new designs in Carpets, Linoleums and Oil Cloths; and every day brings something new. Floor coverings are here at any price you please, and surprising elegance and quality every time. We manage every Department as Merchants with experienced assistants. Stranded stocks mingle not here, as sound business is against them. We can do better for you with stocks selected exclusively for the best retail trade. The way we buy has everything to do with the way we sell. There's no economy in old goods at higher prices than we're asking for new.

New Carpets in a complete and varied range.

New Linoleums and Oil Cloths, 8/4, 12 1, and 16 1 widths.

New Draperies, Rope Portiers, Madras and Swiss Muslin, Etc.

DRESS GOODS, VARIETY AND EXCLUSIVENESS.

So broadly comprehensive are the special displays of the various new Fabrics, that the woman who studies them at Madill's may glean all that is known or can be learned of the correct weaves and colors for this fall and winter season. This DRESS GOODS DISPLAY includes everything, Plain Suitings in all the approved weaves and the distinctively new shadings; A showing of Fancy Tweed Suitings unmatched in variety; The beautiful Plaids, the Black Suitings, the Tweed Coatings, plain and fancy Voiles and Eoliennes, Etc. You're invited to see this great collection before making your purchases.

Braids, Gimpes, Appliques, in a complete range to match Dress Fabrics.

Black Taffeta Silk, one yard wide (guaranteed) $1 00 a yard.

Tucked and Featherstitched Allover Chiffons, Eyelet Allover Chiffons, Insertions and Laces to match.

Ladies' and Children's Gloves in Great Variety.

Larger and better assortment than in all former showings of any season. That's a strong statement, to be sure, but even that doesn't do the New Autumn Stocks too much justice. Our Fall and Winter Gloves are to hand in the leading shades and cuts. Gloves for Ladies, Gloves for Misses, Gloves for Boys and Girls. Dressed and Undressed Kid, Swede, Lined Moko, Silk Lined Moko, English Driving Gloves, 20 button length, black and white; Dressed and Undressed Kid Gloves. Worthily of a special visit to the Glove Department, just to see the new shades. (Sole agents for Penny's Gloves in Napanee)

HOUSEHOLD STAPLES

There is not a housekeeper in Napanee that will not appreciate this effort of ours to make it unusually profitable for them in the line of household necessities. This is the time of year when lots of people find out their need of such Household necessities as Sheetings, Pillow Cottons, Bed Spreads, Blankets, Flannellettes, Towels, Towellings, Table Linens and Napkins, or Gingham, Shirtings, Wrapperettes, Flannels. The stock at Madill's is one of newness. Let us give you quotations on these goods. They have been bought right and are being sold right.

MADILL BROS.

Gettin' Wisdom

is a comparatively easy task if you start it while you are young. Don't allow your child's eyes to be ruined for all time because they look too 'dod' with glasses on. We'll tell you the truth as to whether they need glasses or not, and charge you nothing for the telling. Headaches in children are suspicious. We are also the best people to guarantee the quality of our frames, it being part of our jewelry business to acquire that ability and knowledge.

MORVEN

We had a very welcome rain on Saturday.

This section was visited with a heavy frost, Sunday night, which cut all the garden stuff.

Hay and grain are being taken into the station quite freely. The season's crop is about all threshed in this section.

The potatoes are about all dug, with a fair yield.

A little stranger has applied for board at the home of W. Wood. It is a girl and Mr. Wood wears the broadest smile of any man in town. A little girl has also arrived at the home of H. Peters.

ENOCH HAD THE ADVANTAGE.

A Man Who Received a Hot Welcome
From His Mother-in-Law.

"My son," began the somewhat crumpled-looking man to a boy who ran against him under the grocer's awning, "I suppose you have no objection to earning five cents this morning?"

"No, sir."

"It won't take you over three minutes to do so. Did you ever hear of Enoch Arden?"

"No, sir."

"Probably not, owing to your youth.
Enoch left home and was gone for a number of years. When he returned it was to find his wife married to another man. I am not exactly an Enoch Arden.
I left home only last night, and I don't anticipate that my wife has rushed matters. That's where I live—at the corner of the alley. I'd like you to walk down and look up at the sitting-room windows. You will come back and tell me whether she is smiling or weeping, whether she is red in the face or is pale and solemn. You understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"Owing to your youth I can't explain matters more fully. Whatever you report will be my cue as to how to act.
You will know all about it after you grow up and get married. Run along, now."

In seven or eight minutes the lad returned and reported that a woman, who was very pale and had tears in her eyes, was looking from one of the side windows.

"That signifies that she has repented, wants me to forgive her, and that I'm all right," replied the man, as he handed over the five cents. "That'll do, my son. I'll go in by the front door and surprise her."

He settled his hat on his head, produced his latch-key, and ascended the steps, while the boy waited to see how things would shape.

The key had scarcely entered the lock when the door was pulled open, and a woman about fifty years old, with her jaws hard set, and three feet of broom-handle in her right hand, sprang out.
The man was so taken by surprise that he received four or five whacks before he could leap over the railing and make off, while the boy darted after him to escape a similar infliction. He caught up with the man about two streets away and said:

"Mr. Arden, that wasn't the pale-faced, tearful lady who sat at the window?"

"No, my son, it was not," solemnly replied the man. "It was the pale-faced, tearful lady's maternal relative, and, hang me, if I hadn't clean forgotten that I had a mother-in-law to deal with! That's where Enoch had the advantage of me, but perhaps I can figure it out somehow. That's all you can do for me now, sonny, and you may go home, while I wander about and think up some plan to get even with the game."

KAI WANG;

A TALE OF SOUTHERN CHINA.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

There were those in the little company clustered in that upper chamber who knew immediate action was essential.

When Dr. Jack had been assisted through the opening which his own in-demonitable energy had made, Kai Wang proceeded to cover the hole with a lot of matting he had discovered. Some people have that rare faculty for finding just what is especially needed for the occasion, and such persons generally prove very handy to have about.

Then he struck a match and calmly proceeded to bring the invaluable old lantern into play. To relate how Larry blessed it now, as much as he had cursed it under his breath at first when it persisted in banging against his shins, would betray the valiant little fellow's confidence, but the glances he bent upon it were full of deep veneration, and he was now ready to believe it his best friend.

All of them were greatly interested in a hurried survey of their position.

This was especially true of the maker of the heathen gods.

Kai Wang knew the intricacies of the imperial palace about as well as the next one, and it was a matter of considerable importance that he should be able to recognize his surroundings in order to plan the line of escape from under that dangerous and hostile roof.

The consultation below could not last long.

Presently it would give way to action on the part of the delegates. Some would speed through the passages to give the alarm, and in all too brief a time the palace would be in an uproar.

It was very unfortunate that discovery should have followed their arrival at Jack's quarters.

Knowing how the guards would be doubled and every precaution taken to prevent their escape from the royal building, Larry would have been most abominably dejected over the outcome only for one thing.

This was a supreme faith in their guide.

As the mariner pins his fortunes upon the compass and the barometer, so he was ready to believe Kai Wang could be a second Moses to lead them out of the wilderness.

It was as though his prayer was answered.

How it was to be done was a matter that did not enter into Larry's philosophy, nor did he concern himself very much about it; the mind that had brought them through other difficulties must surely be equal to this task; and, besides, there was Dr. Jack to suggest new ideas.

It is wonderful how such perfect confidence takes possession of a true believer at times, and gives his spirit balm, even in the face of the most appalling conditions.

And Kai Wang certainly proved beyond all peradventure that he was worthy of such trust.

When he had swept one glance around him the Chinaman smiled.

It was only a faint flicker that appeared upon his yellow face, but Dr.
Jack, whose eyes had been riveted in that quarter, caught it, and a great wave of satisfaction swept over him.

Kai Wang knew where they were, and was best able to understand, it might be set down as certain that the shrewd female diplomat of the Chinese empire would not retire yet a while; and if Kai Wang could, through his own private resources, secure an interview, he might be able to present his case in such a strong light that she would grant his favor.

At any rate the said Kai Wang seemed full of assurance, possibly relying on certain facts that were known only to himself and the eminent statesman now exiled to a survey of the troublesome Yellow River, and which secrets must prove of considerable importance to the Dowager Empress.

As for Larry, when he grasped the situation, and realized what a dashing bid for fortune the keen-witted Celestial meant to make, he could hardly catch enough breath to faintly exclaim:

"Hear, hear!"

It was not Kai Wang's idea to lose any time, though, as a Chinaman, he found it a difficult thing to cut matters short.

Dr. Jack speedily understood that they were to remain in this spot, awaiting his return.

If he came not when half an hour went by, they might grow anxious, but should wait twice that time ere making a move.

Should he finally fail to appear, Dr.
Jack was to undertake to guide the expedition according to certain directions he left; and, though hope of escape was rather slender, still desperate cases cannot wait upon circumstances.

Then he left them, and started upon his dangerous mission with as much sang froid as might have marked a pleasure jaunt to Tien-Tsin.

Ah, Kai Wang was indeed a most remarkable fellow, and had few equals in the Flowery Kingdom, where gracious phrases drop like precious pearls from the lips of her saffron-hued children and where the diplomats of Europe may well journey to pick up a few new points in their line.

When their courier had departed, our friends made all necessary preparation for a stay that might be long or short according to the favor of fortune.

Dr. Jack had been armed, and much of his lost strength seemed to be returning to him under the happy condition prevailing.

With his beloved wife nestled close a side, he had good reason to summon all his reserve powers to the front.
Danger to Avis was quite enough to arouse the lionlike qualities for which he had always been distinguished, and throw him upon his mettle as a son of Mars.

The lantern had been extinguished.

While they waited for a signal that would convey the glad intelligence of Kai Wang's happy return from his momentous interview with the great Dowager Empress, they had no need of any illuminating agency.

Besides, such a condition of affair only added to the dangers with which they were surrounded, without affording any compensating advantage.

So Jack had begged Larry to "dous the glim," and they remained there in the corridor, awaiting the turn of fortune's wheel.

Dr. Jack would have been the happiest man in China if Avis were only at the legation of the American or British Minister.

The guards were coming with blazing torches and flashing weapons.

As the red glare lighted up the motley crew, Dr. Jack saw that among them were many of those fierce fighters with whom he had once before measured swords—the merciless Black Flags.

This was, however, but another link added to the chain of misery by which they were encompassed.

If death was to be their portion, what mattered such minor details as this? There would be a dreadful rush, a roar of battle, heaps of slain, and then—they would sleep well.

Only Avis! How fervently that man prayed she would know little of pain—she for whom he had many times in the past risked life and limb, and to save whom he would even now have willingly stood the tortures of the Inquisition.

Truly, there can come to man no keener agony on earth than the knowledge that one he loves is in mortal danger.

The three determined men, feeling that this promised to be their last stand, made ready to receive their foe.

Weapons? Thank Heaven they were abundantly supplied, because of the wisdom displayed by those who had arranged the raid; and all of them knew well how to use them.

Lord Rackett had dropped on one knee.

So his grenadier forefathers had awaited the charge on many a bloody field, from Bannockburn down to Waterloo and the Crimea.

It may be affirmed without danger of dispute that this scion of the house of Plympton faced the foe with just as steady nerves as ever his ancestors had displayed on other fields of valor.

Larry was between—Larry, whose stature could never be taken as an index to his courage, for within that small frame dwelt a heart of oak that would have done credit to a giant.

And the mob of soldiers came on, shouting as only Chinese fighters know how, making every hideous noise possible, doubtless with the double purpose of frightening those whom they sought, and at the same time scaring away divers evil spirits that might be haunting these passages of the palace so seldom used.

Dr. Jack hated to open the fight. He would have sacrificed much for an opportunity to arbitrate the matter, and, to save Avis, would willingly have given up all his hopes for the great railway concession.

But such a proposition would have fallen upon deaf ears if advanced under the present conditions, even if it could be heard above the frightful clamor.

These men of war were after blood, and nothing less would satisfy them.

Then the old fighting spirit crept over Dr. Jack. He could feel it coming—that strange, hot, feverish sensation that made his nerves tingle and his fingers clutched weapons eagerly, while his teeth closed fiercely as his eyes emitted a furious gleam.

So Crockett and Travis stood at the never-to-be-forgotten Alamo, piling the CHINESE STUDENTS IN JAPAN.

Chinese students are still going to Japan in ever increasing numbers, at the rate of 500 or 600 a month. The total number has already reached over 15,000. Several schools which have been recently started in Tokio are specially for these students. The strictest measures are now being adopted by the Chinese Minister at Tokio and the Japanese authorities to control these young men, the Minister having given instructions to all that they must record their home address and their ancestry unto the third generation as well as their Japanese address, so that he may at any time be able to deal with them individually if occasion arises; and the Japanese have them closely under police surveillance.

BABY NEARLY DEAD.

Mrs. John Cuddy, Killaloe Station, Ont., says:—"My baby was so nearly dead that I had to place my ear close to his breast to know that he was breathing. He was in this condition when I first gave him Baby's Own Tablets and I hardly dared hope that they would save him. But they helped him almost at once, and soon made him a well child. He is now two years old and weighs forty-five pounds and has never known a sick day since I first gave him the Tablets." Baby's Own Tablets cure constipation, indigestion, diarrhoea, teething troubles, break up colds, expel worms and give little ones natural healthy sleep. And the mother has a guarantee that this medicine contains no opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 25c a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Pill for Generous Eaters.—There are many persons of healthy appetite and poor digestion who, after a hearty meal, are subject to much suffering. The food of which they have partaken lies like lead in their stomachs. Headache, depression, a smothering feeling follow. One so afflicted is unfit for business or work of any kind. In this condition Permelee's Vegetable Pills will bring relief. They will assist the assimilation of the aliment, and used according to direction will restore healthy digestion.

WILL HAUL GRAIN NEXT SEASON.

Rapid Progress Being Made in the Construction of G. T. P.

"Canada will have a remarkable railway when the Grand Trunk Pacific is built," is the statement which was made recently by Mr. Collingwood Schreiber, chief consulting engineer to the Canadian Government.

"I have just come from the West, where I have been inspecting the portion of the line from Winnipeg to Edmonton. I drove the entire distance of the route from Portage la Prairie to Edmonton.

"The surveyors have found a splendid line. It is practically straight, and the maximum grade to the eastward is four-tenths of one per cent., and westward five-tenths.

"As the Grand Trunk Pacific people expect to do about as well through the mountains from Edmonton to the Pacific, and as the national transcontinental surveyors have practically secured these grades all the way from Winnipeg to the Atlantic, there is no doubt the line will be the best of all the transcontinental lines, and capable of the most economic administration and handling the greatest amount of traffic at a minimum cost.

"By autumn there will be over a hundred miles of the line west of Winnipeg railed, and there is little doubt the road will participate in the hauling of the crop next year. The settlers are going in with the road. Their shacks were seen dotting the prairie for the whole distance from Portage la Prairie to Edmonton.

"The company has sixteen surveying parties working to the west of Edmonton through the mountains. The contractors are encountering some difficulty in getting labor. However, there is no doubt the road will be built in a very short time."

THE GREAT NORTH COUNTRY.

Nimrod was a mighty hunter, but had he hunted in the "Highlands of Ontario," he would have been a mightier one. Nimrod hunted for glory, but those who go into the several districts of Northern Ontario hunt for game. Those Indians who made the first canoe of birch bark long ago, were our greatest benefactors. The children of those Indians knew the canoe, and they know how to use it, and they know just where the moose and deer are to be found. They will be the best guides you ever had. The "The Muskoka Lakes," "Lake of Bays," "Maganetawan River," "French River," "Temagami," "Georgian Bay" and several other districts in this Great North Country abound with deer and moose. The best hunting on the American Continent is offered here. Write the undersigned for copy of "Haunts of Fish and Game," an illustrated publication issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System, giving all information, game laws, maps, etc., to G. T. Bell, General Passenger Agent, Montreal.

THE DUCHESS' DOG.

The Duchess of Newcastle has some sixteen special canine pets, which roam about the house, and her particular favorite has a trick, when it fancies itself all neglected, of going up to an Indian drum which hangs in the hall, and, with drumming with its forefoot until it obtains the desired attention.

"Did you hear there was a skeleton in Smith's family?" asked Jones. "You don't say so!" exclaimed his wife. "Where?" "Inside of Smith," replied Jones. And then he chuckled idiotically.

The manufacturers number of the Winnipeg "Commercial" published by the Hugh C. MacLean Company Limited, of Winnipeg, Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal, is exceptionally brilliant and reflects great credit on its publishers. Every manufacturer in Canada should see this publication.

Youngster (triumphantly): "Father, I am not sitting on the lowest form now." Parent: "That's right! Here's ten cents for you. But tell me how you came to pass on to the higher form." Youngster: "The lowest form is being painted."

It is a Liver Pill.—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, particularly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

THE KAFFIR TELEGRAPH.

How Messages Are Sent From One Chief to Another in Zulu Land.

Mention has been frequently made during the recent native troubles in South Africa of the "Kaffir telegraph," the strange system by which news of any importance is communicated from one extreme of the native territories to the other with almost incredible rapidity, and the working of which, it has been stated, is still a mystery to the white man.

This latter statement is scarcely correct. Numbers of up-country residents, traders, and the like are well acquainted with many of the ways in which communication passes from tribe to tribe.

When a chief receives a message he selects a fast runner, and gives him the words, and instructs this man to run in a given direction as fast as he can—horses are never used in this work—until he is exhausted. When he can run no longer he enters the nearest kraal, selects the chief man, gives him the words, and this man in his turn picks out his fastest runner, who at once starts off until he also is exhausted, when he acts in a similar way.

It is not an enviable task carrying a chief's message at night, for the native is always suspicious of cattle thieves. Assegais and guns are handy, and the man who dashes past a kraal in the dark may possibly come to a sudden stop with an assegai or a bullet through him; but, failing this extreme method he is liable, when near the borders, to be seized by the native police as a suspicious character. With relays of runners like this a hundred miles can be covered in twenty-four hours.

The system of "calling messages" is largely used by the natives in war time. The air in South Africa is so dry that sound carries a very long way. Native messengers are stationed at the tops of hills to call messages to each other. It is no exaggeration to say that they can make themselves heard and carry on conversation a quarter of a mile distant; but for obvious reasons they cannot be stationed so close together, so a system of signalling by smoke is carried on at night, but this means is not fol-

It is only necessary to read the testimonials to be convinced that Holloway's Corn Cure is unequalled for the removal of corns, warts, etc. It is a complete extingisher.

"Tell me, Freddie, said May Sweetly's admirer to her young brother, 'who is this other fellow that's been calling on your sister?' 'I don't know his name,' replied Freddie; 'I call him 'April showers.' 'What for?' 'Because he brings May flowers!'"

"Man is filled with Misery."—This is not true of all men. The well, sound of lung, clear of eye, alert and buoyant with health, are not miserable, whatever may be their social condition. To be well is to be happy, and we can all be well by getting and keeping our bodies in a healthful state. Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil will help to do this.

EXIT CRUSOE'S ISLAND.

The Famous Island Disappears From the Map.

A telegram from Lima, Peru, states that the island of Juan Fernandez, off the Chilean coast, is reported to have disappeared in consequence of the heavy tidal wave which followed the earthquake. The news, which has not been confirmed, was brought to the mainland by the captain of a steamer.

The island of Juan Fernandez, known as "Robinson Crusoe's Island," is about 150 miles from the coast of Chili, and is thirteen miles long by four miles wide. A Chilean settlement of about forty huts existed for some years on one side of the island.

Robinson Crusoe thus describes his first impressions of the island:—

"... There was a hill not above a mile from me, which rose up very steep and high, and which seemed to overlook some other hills which lay as in a ridge from it northward. I travelled for discovery up to the top of that hill, where, after I had with great difficulty and labor got to the top, I saw my fate, to my great affliction—namely, that I was in an island, environed every way with the sea, no land to be seen, except some rocks which lay a great way off, and two small islands, less than this, which lay

"... I also found that the island ... was barren, and as I saw good reason to believe, uninhabited, except by wild beasts, of which, however, I saw none."

The island was first discovered by Juan Fernandez, a Spanish pilot, in 1563. Alexander Selkirk, the son of a Scotch shoemaker, who ran away to sea at the age of nineteen was put ashore on the island in 1704, after quarrelling with the captain of his ship, the Cinque Ports. He remained there for nearly five years in what he described as "pleasant exile."

On returning to England, Selkirk was visited by Daniel Defoe, who journeyed from London to Bristol for the express purpose of seeing him. Selkirk placed all his papers in Defoe's hands, and the story of Robinson Crusoe was the result.

The island was frequently visited in late years, and in 1868 the officers of H.M.S. Topaz erected a tablet in memory of Selkirk near the summit of the hill where he watched for passing ships.

DOOMED BY TERRORISTS

List of Those Against Whom Death Sentences Have Been Passed.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: Nearly every minister, courtier and army officer whose name was even indirectly connected with the repressions and punitive actions of the last year is now under sentence of death at the hands of the Terrorists.

After M. Stolypin, who heads the list and whose life is not worth an hour's purchase, the most important condemned man is General Alexis Ignatieff, the leader of the so-called "Camarilla" or "Star Chamber," which, though it has no official status, meets regularly and forces its counsels upon the Czar.

Ignatieff is a nephew of the Count Ignatieff, popularly known as "The Father of Lies," who negotiated the San Stefano treaty. Alexis Ignatieff is a ferocious reactionary and anti-Semite. His name immediately comes up whenever dictatorship is suggested.

Next in importance is M. Durnovo, late Minister of the Interior. He lived in Interlaken under the name of Miller, with the result that an innocent Frenchman named Muller was shot dead by a woman Terrorist. Durnovo is corrupt, uneducated and brutal. He is the inventor of "punitive expeditions" against disaffected centres of population.

Gen. Rennenkampf became known during the late war with Japan, where he commanded the Cossacks without the least success. His offence is that he led a punitive expedition along the Siberian Railway, shooting people without trial wholesale. He took innocent women and even school girls as hostages in his "armored train," and threatened to shoot them if any attempt was made against his safety. The armored train consisted of a saloon and four prison vans, which were packed full of men and women of all classes, from the curator of Tomsk University downward.

Gen. Meller-Zakomelsky has also received a death sentence for offences similar to Rennenkampf. At Khilka he shot eleven men and boys without trial or enquiry.

Governor Kurloff of Minsk, has been sentenced for organizing massacres of Jews.

GIRL SHOT WARDERS.

Lukheria Trostoff, a girl of 18 years, escaped last week from Kazan City Prison, after killing three warders and wounding a fourth. Mile. Trostoff's associates outside the jail made a tunnel under the street over three feet in diameter, and finally worked their way to the floor of the girl's cell. When, at night, she attempted to escape, the roof of the tunnel fell in, leaving a gap in the roadway. Warned from outside, the warden on duty rushed into the cell, and not seeing the prisoner, fired all the shots of his revolver into the tunnel. When the six bullets were spent, Mile. Trostoff, covered with earth, emerged from the tunnel and shot the warden through the head. Two other prison officials who came in without lights she also shot dead, putting a bullet into the leg of a fourth, and escaped into the town.

DISARMED THE POLICE.

Grave agrarian disorders have broken out in the province of Viatka, the centre of disturbances being the important district of Malbush, with a population of over 100,000, where the inhabitants of seventy villages are reported to have joined in the uprising, have disarmed and expelled the police, and are pillaging and destroying the residences of the land-owners, and devastating the misunderstanding arose over the signals for passing, so the two steamers came together with sufficient force to cut a hole into the Maud several feet deep near the hatchway. Twenty-five passengers were aboard the Maud, but with the exception of Barrett all were safely transferred to the Ottawan. The cargo consisted of 8 horses, 30 cattle, 150 sheep and 200 chickens, all of which were lost. The river where the accident occurred widens out into what is called the Lake of Two Mountains. The Maud had been engaged in the Ottawa River trade for twenty-five years. She is valued at $10,000, and will probably be a complete loss.

SHOT A DETECTIVE.

A Desperate Burglar Captured in Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: In a desperate attempt to escape from a store that he was robbing on Sunday morning, Robert Walker, a ticket-of-leave man from St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, shot and seriously wounded Detective Le Huquet, and was himself knocked senseless by a blow from a pickaxe handle in the hands of Detective O'Keefe. His skull is fractured and he is not expected to recover. A companion who assisted him in the burglary escaped, and has not yet been captured. Both Detective and burglar had to be taken to the hospital in an ambulance. Walker and his companion had been seen loitering around the premises of the Starke Hardware Company near the waterfront, and as their purpose was suspected, a warning was sent to police headquarters. Detectives Le Huquet and O'Keefe were immediately sent out, and when they arrived at the Starke warehouse they found that a pane had been removed from a back window. Entering, they heard a conversation upstairs, and so waited below for the men to come down. Presently they came, and as they reached the bottom of the stairway Le Huquet stepped out, and, levelling a revolver, called on the burglars to hold up their hands. Walker replied with a shot. The first bullet struck Le Huquet's pistol arm at the elbow, disabling it. The second took effect in the right side of the neck, and the third in the left side. None of them is likely to prove fatal. O'Keefe was carrying a pick-axe handle, and he was a few paces away. Three shots were fired before he could strike a blow. His first stroke, however, sent Walker sprawling, and meantime the other burglar escaped. Walker is only nineteen years old. He has already served a considerable time in prison.

TEN MILLION MARKETED.

Record Number of Bushels of Wheat Handled by C. P. R.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The announcement was made on Thursday by the Canadian Pacific that this year there have been delivered to the elevators on the lines of the company and loaded direct on cars the large total of over ten million bushels of grain. Of this very large total about half a million bushels have been of grains other than wheat.

The total receipts have been considerably over ten million, however, the receipts of wheat alone being only 24-

Fashion Hints.

BLOUSES WITH YOKES.

There has been a definite change since last year in the position blouses occupy, brought about by the vogue of whole costumes in place of last year's stunning suits, relieved by the sheerest and most beautiful of blouses. No longer is the blouse the inevitable accompaniment of any and every costume, except the true "dress" affairs.

But the blouses that are left to us have been found plenty of use for. Most of them have yokes, introduced perhaps as the only part of the hand embroidery that is on ninety-nine out of a hundred of them. And the majority have the embroidery concentrated on the yoke, with sprays scattered upon the rest of the blouse, sleeves as well as both front and back.

The simplest treatment of all in making is to finish off the yoke with a small scallop—the same wee, simple kind that is in evidence upon nine out of ten pieces of lingerie that Paris sends over. The blouse itself is tucked a couple of inches below the edge, the tucks made so fine that in spite of their number the fullness is controlled. Deep cuffs may end at the upper edge in the same sort of a scallop, from which the puff of the sleeve spreads out in tucks like those just below the yoke.

Quite effective blouses are made with lace taking the place (or minimizing the work, at least) of hand embroidery. When the former is the case the lace wanders down the front in some novel fashion.

If just a touch of embroidery is desired, the blouse is usually quite elaborately trimmed with lace, the insertion disposed so that there is just a small space in front, high on the yoke, with, perhaps, two even smaller spaces upon the back, or upon the shoulders extending over onto the back. Upon these spaces is embroidered a delicate spray usually, although sometimes a heavy-headed rose, with a bit of exquisite lace for the centre, is used instead. Whatever the motif, it is invariably repeated upon the cuffs.

Such a sleeve seems more individual—more as though the whole scheme of the making were planned before even a stitch of the embroidery was taken. Just a small motif on a cuff savors too much of the patterns which come all ready for making up—some of them rich enough, but many of them as nearly alike in their general style as if they were machine-made and cut off the same piece.

The collarless blouse is no longer seen, although the collarless dress—or a gown cut so slightly low as to seem little more than collarless—is in high favor with the younger element, who don such gowns for a dozen occasions where in seasons past nothing but a high-necked gown was permissible.

And there is very little blousing in front, the idea being to get the effect of a loose blouse, while in reality every scrap of fullness is carefully considered and the blouse fitted with far more care than even those boasted that came out to wear with the tight-fitting tailor suit of a year ago.

Black gowns, most of them of spangled gauze, are much favored for evening wear.

LONGER SKIRTS.

With the dressier sort of suits have come out some that are veritable costumes, the waist worn with them is definite a part of the suit that the impression of unity is sharp and distinct over 100,000, where the inhabitants of seventy villages are reported to have joined in the uprising, have disarmed and expelled the police, and are pillaging and destroying the residences of the land-owners and devastating the country. Details are difficult to obtain, but it is rumored at Viatka that the administrative police, chiefs in the Malnush district and eight of their subordinates have been killed. The excesses began September 20, with a riot over the enrollment of army reserves for their autumn services.

Disorders have also broken out in the adjoining district at Chistopol, in Kazan province.

POISON FOR POLICE.

A despatch from Moscow says: A man engaged a policeman in conversation on Tuesday, and gave him a pear. After eating it the policeman became dangerously ill, poison having been inserted in the fruit.

An unsuccessful attempt was made at Helsinki on Tuesday to blow up the police reserve barracks. One man was slightly injured. There is no clue to the criminals.

DISORDERS ARE RIFE.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says. Further disquieting information regarding the agrarian situation comes from the Provinces of Saratov and Tambov and the lower Volga region, where serious disorders are anticipated when the recruiting season opens in October. The populations of many communes have adopted formal resolutions discarding the authority of the police and clergy, the rural police are resigning in great numbers, land owners are disposing of their estates at any sacrifice and land values have dropped from $80 to $18 per acre. Details of the uprising at Malnush, Viatka Province, are difficult to obtain, but the peasantry of the Village of Knagorodsk have disarmed the police and proclaimed autonomy.

STOENSEL LEAVES ARMY.

Information was given on Thursday that Lieut. Gen. Stoensel, who commanded the Russian forces at Fort Arthur, on Thursday submitted his resignation from the army. It is understood that it will be accepted. The resignation is said to have been due to the initiative of Emperor Nicholas, who expressed his aversion to any further discussion of the subject in open court.

ANOTHER PLOT AT PETERHOFF.

A despatch to the London Times from St. Petersburg says that another plot has been discovered at Peterhoff against the life of the Czar. A mysterious lady was conveyed by a strong escort to the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul on Wednesday night.

SUNK IN OTTAWA RIVER.

Three Persons were Drowned on the Steamer Maud.

A despatch from Montreal says: Three lives were lost by a collision between the steamers Maud and Ottawa opposite Hudson, on the Ottawa River, about 3.30 on Thursday morning. The dead are:—Maggie Benson of Oka, stewardess; B. Pawley of Levis, engineer, and a passenger named Barrett of Montebello. The Maud was so badly damaged that she sank within a few minutes after the accident occurred. An idea may be formed of how quickly the water engulfed her from the fact that the engineer came up on deck to see what had happened, and then hurried back to get some personal effects. He was not seen again. Barrett also appeared on the deck, but he rushed below to loosen a horse, and was caught. The stewardess mistook her way in the darkness and fell into a hole caused by the wreckage, and met a terrible fate, going headlong into the midst of the livestock.

The Maud was owned by the Ottawa Navigation Company and the Ottawa by the Ottawa Forwarding Company. The former was coming down the river and the latter going up. Apparently a very large total about half a million bushels have been of grains other than wheat.

The total receipts have been considerably over ten million, however, the receipts of wheat alone being only 24,000 bushels short of the ten-million mark. The exact figures for the season so far are: Wheat marketed, 9,976,000 bushels, other grains, 509,000 bushels.

The wheat movement, nevertheless is greatly restricted owing to a shortage in cars. All railroad companies in the Canadian West are completely taxed to handle ordinary freight, let alone grain traffic. The wheat is in the country, but owing to lack of transportation facilities it cannot be forwarded to the lake front. The companies confess that they are unable to adequately handle the present volume of grain traffic.

INCREASE IN IMMIGRATION.

Returns from July Indicate Considerable Advance.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Immigration into Canada for the month of July shows a considerable increase over the immigration for July, 1905. There arrived through ocean ports, 13,207, an increase of 4,096 over the arrivals for July, 1905; and from the United States, 4,569, an increase of 1,836. Thus the total arrivals were 18,176, as against 12,244 in July last year.

The total number of homestead entries during the month was 4,174, an increase of 423. Of the total number of homesteaders, 742 were Canadians from Ontario, 79 from Quebec, 97 Canadians returned from the United States, 1,212 Americans, 625 English, 128 Scotch, 55 Irish, and 210 Hollanders.

Of the 1,300 homesteaders from the United States, 303 were from North Dakota. There was a decrease of 320, 920 acres in the area patented during the month, as compared with July, 1905.

KING AT ABERDEEN.

Performs Ceremony of Opening College Amid Great Enthusiasm.

A despatch from London says: King Edward, accompanied by Queen Alexandra on Thursday opened the new college at Aberdeen. The city was magnificently decorated and visitors from foreign lands were unanimous in declaring that they had never seen anything to equal the appearance the city presented. Their Majesties were received by the Lord Provost and magistrates. The former, after presentation, handed the keys of the city to the King, and then presented Lord Strathcona, the chancellor, and other officials of the college. Their Majesties were enthusiastically received en route to the college, where the Chancellor and Lord Rector received them. The King said it gave him much pleasure to open the new buildings for the promotion of scientific and higher education. Lord Strathcona then presented a gold key to his Majesty, who declared the buildings open, amid intense enthusiasm.

NO LET-UP TO IMMIGRATION.

During Past Six Months 100,000 Have Entered Canada.

A despatch from Montreal says: Immigration towards Canada continues heavy. On Friday no less than 2,250 immigrants passed through Montreal on their way West. They crossed the ocean in the Empress of Ireland, the Canada, the Tunisian, and the Montrose. Many of them were accompanied by their wives and children. The fact that immigration towards the Dominion continues with such unabated vigor comes as a surprise to both the steamship and railway officials. Nothing like it has been known before. During the past six months it is computed that fully 100,000 Britons and Europeans have taken up their residence in the Dominion. Of this number 60,000 have been taken to Western Canada over the C.P.R. Thousands have found homes in Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces.

Milwaukee, Oct. 2.—Wheat—No. 1 Northern, 79 to 81c; No. 2 Northern, 75 to 76c; Dec., 75c asked. Rye—No. 1, 6½ to 6¾c. Barley—No. 2, 55c; sample, 38 to 54c. Corn—No. 3, cash, 46½ to 46¾c; Dec., 43½c. St. Louis, Oct. 2.—Wheat—Cash, 73c; Sept., 70½c; Dec., 72½c; May, 77c.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Trade was active without any special features at the Western Market to-day.

Exporters were offered in limited numbers. Quotations ranged from $4.30 to $4.90, but cattle which would sell at the higher figure were hard to find.

Butchers' cattle were in fairly active demand. Choice picked butchers', $4.35 to $4.50; medium heavy butchers', $3.65 to $4.20; mixed lots and cows, $1.75 to $3.50; fat cows, $3.30 to $3.50; common, $2 to $3.10 per cwt.

Good stockers were quoted at $2.75 to $3.25; feeders, 1,000 to 1,200 lbs. at $3.25 to $3.50; short-keeps, $4.15 to $4.50; feeding bulls, 1,000 to 1,200 lbs. $1.75 to $2.50 per cwt.

Lambs sold at $5.90 to $6.10; ewes at $4 to $4.50; bucks at $3 to $3.50. Calves were steady to firmer, at $3.50 to $8 per cwt.

The market was steady to firm for milk cows, at $25 to $55 each.

Hogs were firmer and unchanged at $6.50 for selects, and $6.25 for lights and fats.

TO ERADICATE DISEASE.

New Regulations Regarding Cattle in Sections of New Provinces.

A despatch from Ottawa says: An order-in-Council has been passed establishing new regulations with a view to eradicating mange in cattle in the infected districts of Alberta and Saskatchewan. These provide that all cattle from the district consigned to Winnipeg or points east must be accompanied by an official certificate of health and be inspected in Winnipeg. The same must accompany cattle bound west or south unless shipped thither for immediate slaughter.

UNHAPPY PHYSICIANS.

Incomes of English Doctors Have Fallen Off 25 Per Cent. Since 1900.

A despatch from London says: According to The British Medical Journal, the incomes of English doctors have fallen off 25 per cent. since 1900. Among the causes named for the falling off is the gradual dying down of the epidemic of influenza, which caused 19,000 deaths. There has been a subsidence of 1,900 in other epidemic sicknesses, and the decrease of winter ailments is attributable it is thought, to the mildness of recent winters.

LONDER SORTS.

With the dresser sort of suits have come out some that are veritable costumes, the waist worn with them so definite a part of the suit that the impression of unity is sharp and distinct.

The skirts of suits are fitted smoothly about the hips, the circular skirt remaining the favorite this fall, as it did last, only this year's circular skirt shows the same down front and back, stitched and even welled to emphasize the fact that there is a seam.

Plenty of them—almost all of the dresser type, in fact—are long, so long that they must be held up in the street.

But you'll never find a woman resenting that! There is nothing in fashions so altogether womanly and graceful as a trailing skirt, and never a woman who wouldn't cheerfully carry a skirt for a mile or two for the exquisite pleasure of dragging that long sweep of material after her over softly carpeted floors.

Jackets have grown shorter, the longest reaching about midway between hip and knee—that length, by the way, was seen on only a few of last year's suits, the ones which were really a year ahead of fashions. But beware of that length if you are short and generally "dumpy"—almost any other figure can wear it, and a tall, slim woman is at her best in it.

Of course, walking suits have the short skirt, which in nine cases out of ten is circular, like the longer ones. But, after all, longer skirts are gaining in favor more and more every day.

Of course it is a little early to "count the chickens," but this seems to be the unanimous opinion at the present date, the question of hats, tailor things, furs and colors being about settled, though the "grande toilette" and evening dress revelations by Paquin, Doucet, Worth, Armand, Dutilleul, Perdoux et Cie, are none the less eagerly awaited.

Hats will be larger, with wide, sweeping brims and a normal way of resting on the head. Though there is still a slight bandeau, with tuille arranged in the now time-honored way, its office is more to serve as a "cache-peigne" than to tilt the hat. What tilt there is forward, so that the thin, flat brim describes a beautiful circle above the brown.

As usual, the French idea of lightness comes first in constructing a hat. Because of their size, many of the best milliners fashion their brims merely of enough layers of tuille to make them opaque. These are stretched flatly over the wire frame.

As might be imagined from such a construction, little more than the edge of the brim is visible, the full tan of shanter crown of velvet or silk covering it on top, while beneath the puffed hair and fluffy tuille of the bandeau fulfill the same office.

The princess gown is still in high favor, though mostly with the fortunate possessors of faultless figures.

$100,000 FIRE AT MONTREAL.

Wipes Out Fourteen Buildings in Suburb of the City.

A despatch from Montreal says: A fire which broke out early on Wednesday afternoon destroyed 14 buildings, either partly or wholly, in St. Louis de Mile End, a northern suburb of Montreal, and rendered some 30 families homeless. The loss is estimated at about $100,000, partly covered by insurance. The fire started in a small house occupied by A. Madame Belanger. Some children were playing in the yard shortly before, and it is supposed they may have started the fire accidentally. The flames spread to some wooden sheds and to a stable in the vicinity, and by this time had made such headway that the local firemen were unable to cope with it, and the Montreal brigade responded to a call for assistance. Both brigades worked all afternoon before the fire was put under control. A woman 85 years of age was rescued from one of the burning houses.

HEALTH

OPERATION WOUNDS.

By the term "operation wound" is meant a poisoned wound received accidentally by the surgeon while operating upon a patient suffering from blood poisoning; but it differs in no way from an accidentally poisoned wound which any one is likely to receive. It is simply the beginning of blood-poisoning.

This term "blood-poisoning" is employed to express a disease resulting from the entrance into the blood of the germs of putrefaction, or of pus formation, or the absorption of the poisons elaborated by these germs existing on the outside of the body. It is a much less common affection now than it was a third of a century ago, before the introduction of antiseptic surgery.

In those days hospital wards, even the cleanest, harbored millions of septic bacteria; the knives and other instruments used in operating, although carefully washed in soap and hot water, were in effect no different from the poisoned arrows of the savage Bowman. The lint used to pack the wounds, the bandages employed to keep the lint in place, the sponge with which the wound was washed at each dressing, were all impregnated with living germs of disease; and, finally, the very hands of the surgeon, scrupulously clean as they seemed to be, were coated with the microbes of supuration and putrefaction.

It is no wonder that certain operations now performed daily in every hospital in the country with perfect result were so uniformly followed by blood-poisoning that the surgeon who dared to perform them, except when death would otherwise be inevitable, would have been guilty of mal-practice.

To-day it is not the patient who is in danger of blood-poisoning, but the surgeon who may accidentally inoculate himself through a scratch or a hang-nail.

The first signs of this are a feeling of soreness in the arm, for a finger is usually the site of inoculation, and redness and a slight swelling at the point where the poison entered. This redness soon extends up the inner side of the arm in streaks which mark the lymphatic vessels. The bacteria are passing through them to gain entrance finally into the general circulation. The glands in the armpit, through which the lymphatics pass, also become hard and swollen.

Soon the patient begins to have fever, alternating, perhaps, with chills, and then the symptoms of general blood-poisoning appear.

The treatment if this infection is purely surgical. The wound should be freely cut open and disinfected so as to remove the source of the poison. If this is done in time and with sufficient thoroughness blood-poisoning may be avoided.—Youth's Companion.

SALVATION ARMY SETTLERS.

Officials Confer With Premier Regarding Immigration Work.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Col. Lamb, Commissioner Coombes and Brigadier Howell, of the Salvation Army, have arrived in Ottawa to confer with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Minister of the Interior in reference to the extension of the Army's emigration work in Great Britain. Col. Lamb, who is the chief of the emigration department of the Army, has just returned from the North-West and British Columbia, where he examined localities suitable for the settlement of emigrants whom the Army expect to send to this country during the coming year.

EMBEZZLER BRICK CAUGHT.

GULF COAST DEVASTATED

Pensacola, Florida, Is a Mass of Wreckage.

A despatch from Louisville, Ky., says: The tropical hurricane which on Thursday churned the waters of the Gulf of Mexico, did much damage on the coast and far inland. Reports received do not indicate any loss of life, but the damage to property is enormous. All wire communication is seriously disarranged, and in some instances has resulted in cutting off cities completely. Numerous washouts have occurred, the interruption from this cause in one case extending thirty miles.

Pensacola, where the maximum velocity of the wind was probably felt, reports a property loss of $3,000,000.

New Orleans furnished numerous wild rumors during the day, but later reports from there indicate that, while there was considerable damage to property, there has been no loss of life. Wires between New Orleans and the Gulf are down, and it may be several days before anything can be heard from the territory between that city and the Gulf or from the shipping which is riding out the storm in the open Gulf.

DAMAGE TO RAILWAYS HEAVY.

The damage to railroads is heavy. Reports to the officials of the Louisville and Nashville Road from the superintendent of the Mobile and Montgomery division indicated that the loss approximates $1,000,000.

At Pensacola the Louisville and Nashville grain elevator has been destroyed and the trackage to Escambia Bay is ruined. The railroad wharf at Pensacola is reported a total loss. Further reports indicate that the road-bed between Minette, Ala., and Mobile, a distance of 30 miles, has been washed away.

The Louisville and Nashville also suffered several washouts near New Orleans. The New Orleans and Northeastern reports its tracks under water at several places near New Orleans.

SHIPS LYING IN STREETS.

A despatch from Flomaton, Ala., says: A few refugees from Pensacola, Fla., fleeing from the fierce Gulf storm, which swept that city, have reached here. Among them is D. J. Ligon, a travelling man, of Atlanta, who tells graphically of the terrors endured by the Florida port. Ligon says: "I have just reached this point from Pensacola, Florida, where I spent a horrible night of torture, passing through the terrific hurricane, which lasted for hours, and, to add to the horror of the night, fire broke out, sending sparks at great speed over the hotel. At 3 o'clock all the guests were awakened and ordered down. Tin roofs were flying in all directions. The rain came in sheets. Part of the town is under water. Ships suffered greatly. All wires are down and cars are not running. Windows by the wholesale were smashed, and thousands of trees are down for miles out of town, some falling on the wires and breaking the same in hundreds of places. The entire city is a mass of wreckage. Not a residence or business house in the city has escaped damage. Roofs are blown off, telegraph, telephone, and electric wires are a tangled mass. The water front is strewn with wreckage for miles on either side of the city, and vessels are piled on the wharves, or where the wharves were, in utter ruin.

"When I was getting out of the city I saw great ships lying in the streets of Pensacola. The water front is gone. Every wharf has been destroyed. Just dows of houses that were surrounded by water above the first floor. One can hardly describe the scenes in the principal streets. They are full of wreckage and locomotion is almost impossible."

MOBILE IN RUINS.

A despatch from Mobile, Alabama, via Meridian, Miss., says: This city is practically in ruins as a result of the Gulf storm which swept it Thursday night. Some 6,000 or 7,000 houses have been damaged or destroyed, and the loss is estimated at from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000. There are no reliable figures to be had as to the loss of life. Three negroes are known to be dead, and there are rumors that fifty persons lost their lives, but as things are, these rumors cannot be verified. It is feared, however, that when all is known the loss of life will be heavy. The city has been placed under martial law and looters will be summarily dealt with.

Every church in the city has suffered, though Christ Church and St. Francis Street Baptist Church suffered more than the others. The damage to Christ Church is estimated at $40,000. St. Francis Street Baptist Church at $10,000.

Mobile's shipping suffered more than anything else. Many of her river boats are now beached or sunken, all complete wrecks. Her docks and those of private corporations are fearfully torn up. The revenue cutter Alert has gone down in Mobile River. She was rammed by some unknown vessel and sank immediately. Her crew is believed to have all escaped.

The depth of water in the wholesale district, which includes the entire section of the city from Royal Street to the river, was seven feet.

AWFUL DEVASTATION.

During the hours between 6 p.m. Thursday and noon on Friday trees fell and roofs crashed by the hundreds through the streets, carried by the terrific wind. Thousands of pieces of slate, tin roofing, cornices, shingles, and, in fact, all kinds of blinds, were torn from their fastenings, and windows slashed as if tissue. Many people were seriously injured and cut by the flying slate and tin roofing.

PROVISIONS ARE SCARCE.

In the city many people and much live stock were rescued after heroic efforts. Provisions are running low. Restaurants feed many, but have no supplies on hand. Ham and eggs constitute the food supply. These, too, will soon become exhausted. Wholesale houses lost many thousands of dollars from flood and willingly paid as high as $1.50 an hour for common labor. Even at this figure few men, white or black, would accept work.

The wind of Thursday was of longer duration and more tornado-like, twisting everything in its path, and more destruction than former storms of like nature that have visited Mobile.

The fruit trees and fall vegetable crops all over Southern Alabama and Mississippi are ruined. So, also, is the cotton, sugar-cane and other crops. One large Mississippi planter made the assertion on Friday that he would willingly accept $15 for his cotton crop and feel afterwards that he had gotten the best of the deal.

All along the lines of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad there were huge trees lying flat upon the ground with limbs torn off and twisted. The streams are all out of their banks, and for 25 miles north of Mobile, looking to the right of

GRANTS WILL BE INCREASED.

Horticultural Societies Will Receive Larger Government Aid.

A despatch from Toronto says: A statement has just been completed by Mr. H. B. Cowan, Provincial Superintendent of Horticultural Societies, showing how the various horticultural societies of the province are likely to be affected by the new Act governing horticultural societies, which was passed at the recent session of the Ontario Legislature and which will come into effect the first of next year. This statement shows that, owing to the fact that the grant to horticultural societies has been increased by $1,500, most of the societies in the province will receive an increased grant. Only about ten societies will have their grants reduced to any considerable extent. These include the societies at Brantford, Cardinal, Stirling, Deseronto, Belleville, Nanapanee, Cobourg and Brampton. In each of these cases the society mentioned has been receiving larger grants in the past than most of the other societies in the province, which accounts for the decrease in their grants.

ORE WORTH $300,000 A TON.

Gold Strike at Wabigoon Surpasses All Previous Discoveries.

A despatch from Wabigoon, Ont., says: The gold strike in Blum's Laurentian Mine surpasses in richness all previous discoveries. The raise from the first level is now fifty feet up, and the ore continues all the way as rich as the ore on the first level, which astounded the world when the strike was made last December. A drift connecting the top of the raise with the main shaft is now being driven, in which massive gold was encountered, and which the machine drills could not penetrate. A single blast broke down over $15,000 worth of gold. Three-fourths of the weight of the ore is native gold, valued at over $300,000 per ton.

LOWER RAILWAY RATES.

Minimum of 2½ Cents per Mile East of Illinois.

A despatch from Chicago says: The Central Passenger Association at a meeting on Tuesday decided to put in effect November 1, a two-and-a-half-cent rate in all its territory east of Illinois in which the State Legislature has not already made a maximum rate of two cents. This involves a lowering of all the inter-State passenger rates north of the Ohio River and west of Syracuse.

EMBEZZLER BRICK CAUGHT.

Reported Capture of Manager of Wampole Company in Japan.

A despatch from Ottawa says: H. W. Prick, defaulting manager of the W. K. Wampole Company of Perth, Ontario, who disappeared on July 1st last, has, according to report, been arrested in Japan. The arrest is said to have been made by a detective employed by the Toronto General Trusts Co. He will be brought back for trial.

THE CHILDREN'S ALDERMAN.

He Is Elected Lord Mayor of London, England.

A despatch from London says: Sir William Treloar, Alderman of the City of London for the Ward of Farringdon Without since 1892, was on Saturday elected Lord Mayor of London, in succession to Walter Vaughan Morgan. Sir William has been known as the "Children's Alderman," because of his many benefactions to the children of the slums. He was largely instrumental in securing the opening of the British Museum on Sundays.

SIXTY VICTIMS OF RAINS.

Torrential Downpour Occasions Immense Damage in Spain.

A despatch from Madrid says: Enormous damage has been done in the Provinces of Tarragona and Valladolid by torrential rains. At the Village of Santa Maria the bodies of sixty drowned persons have been recovered. The village is in ruins and the survivors, in a starving condition and panic stricken, have fled to Murcia. The rice crop in the Valencia district is devastated.

I myself saw, however, many women and children taken from second-storey win-

BOARD OF HEALTH REPORT.

Diseases and Deaths From Contagion in August.

A despatch from Toronto says: The returns from 745 division registrars of the province give 2,570 deaths from all causes, representing a population of 2,091,183, which makes a death-rate of 14.2 in 1,000, and for the same month last year 2,300 deaths were reported from a population of 100,000 less. The table of contagious diseases shows the number of cases, smallpox being the same in August of last year, while scarlet fever has been somewhat more prevalent. The deaths from diphtheria dropped from 21 to 8. Typhoid caused 29 more deaths.

BANK CLERK MISSING.

Alleged Robbery of Twenty-five Thousand Dollars.

A despatch from Montreal says: A report has been sent to the police headquarters that a clerk of the head office of the Bank of British North America has not been at his post this week, and that his accounts show a shortage of $25,000. Supreme efforts are being made to keep the affair from the public, and so far nothing official can be obtained, either from the bank or the police, except the bare admission of the defalcation. The absent clerk's name is naturally used in this connection. It is supposed that he left, fearing exposure by the annual inspection.

BANK MANAGER WAS KILLED.

Cut Down by Express While Crossing Rails at Dutton.

A despatch from Dutton says: Mr. Harry Craig, manager of the Molson's Bank, Dutton, was instantly killed here on Friday evening at the Michigan Central Station while talking to Mr. Siston, a friend, who was waiting to board the "Wolverine" Express for St. Thomas. He was standing on the platform between the double tracks, and attempted to cross in front of the "Wolverine" as it came into the station. The engine struck him and threw him some distance. When picked up life was extinct.

HOME ABROAD FOR CZAR.

Quarters are Being Prepared for Him at Biarritz.

A despatch to the Echo de Paris from Biarritz, on the Bay of Biscay, says that quarters are being prepared there for Emperor Nicholas and the Russian Imperial family, who will soon join the Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch and his family, who recently arrived at Biarritz. The report is not credited here.

AGRICULTURAL SAMPLES.

Hon. Frank Cochrane Receives Specimens for Abitibi.

A despatch from Toronto says: Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, has received from Mr. Frank Moberley, of Abitibi, a number of samples of barley, wheat and native grass. The samples are very fine notwithstanding the fact that the season, according to the statements of the settlers, was the worst in years. In this district Hon. Nelson Monteith, Minister of Agriculture, has selected the site for the Government experimental station.

All along the lines of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad there were huge trees lying flat upon the ground with limbs torn off and twisted. The streams are all out of their banks, and for 25 miles north of Mobile, looking to the right of the railroad, one can see nothing but a solid sheet of water running swiftly toward Mobile. Many farmhouses are situated in this inundated section, and many people may have lost their lives.

DR. SAVIGNAC CAPTURED.

Tried to Seize His Revolvers When Officers Ran Him Down.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Dr. J. A. Savignac, who attempted to murder his wife and mother-in-law on Monday night of last week, was arrested on Saturday evening by Detectives Dicks and Ryan, at Melocheville, in Beauharnois County, and is now in the Ottawa jail. Since Monday Savignac has been gradually working his way towards the United States frontier. Hearing on Friday that he had been seen around Coteau, the detectives immediately posted off to that point, where they arrived Friday evening. Enquiries led them to conclude that their man had gone east, and before daybreak on Saturday they were on the road towards River Beaudette, which is at the foot of the Soulanges Canal. At this point they ascertained that the man they wanted had been ferried across the river to Melocheville by a man named Henry Lalonde. Lalonde was found, and for a consideration undertook to take the detectives across in the drenching rain. Lalonde did not know where Savignac had gone, but he directed the detectives to the house of a farmer named Arthur Hamault for information.

As soon as the kitchen door opened Dicks saw his man, quietly reading a newspaper. Dicks sprang at Savignac, and the latter tried to get at his revolvers, which were lying on the table. Fortunately he was too late, otherwise there might have been more blood-letting. There was a wild time in the kitchen, however, for five minutes as Savignac fought like a tiger to get away. The two detectives got a vehicle and drove with Savignac to Beauharnois, from which point a St. Lawrence and Adirondack train took them to Montreal. By 2 o'clock Sunday morning Savignac was behind the bars in Ottawa.

FATHER SAW SON DEAD.

Boy Killed By Train on Which Parent Was a Passenger.

A despatch from Moncton, N.B., says: Within a few yards of Moncton station on Saturday night 13-year-old William Billiveau was run down and killed by a train on which his father was a passenger. The lad's father was the first to alight, and was horrified to find that the victim of the accident was his own son. The lad was driving to the station to meet his father, and did not see the approaching train.

CANADA-MEXICO SERVICE.

Contract Signed by Minister—Two Vessels for Route.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The contract for a direct steamship service between Canada and Mexico on the Pacific coast was signed by the Minister of Trade and Commerce to-day. Under this contract, as has been explained, an English company, represented by Capt. Worsnop, will put two steamers of not less than 3,000 tons each on the route, thus giving a monthly service. Vancouver and Victoria will be the terminal ports in Canada, and Acapulco, Mazatlan and Salina Cruz the ports of call in Mexico. Canada and Mexico each contribute an annual subsidy of about $85,000.

Does Your Heart Beat

Yes, 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills.

COW-TRUSTING ASSOCIATIONS.

Since January 1906 sixteen cow testing associations have been organized through the initiative of the Dairy Commissioner's Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Records are being kept of the production of 4,500 cows owned by the 350 members of these associations. The results will be tabulated and published as quickly as possible after the season is finished. This is only the beginning of what should be a great national movement for the improvement of the dairy industry in Canada. Sufficient data have been collected already to show that there is no line of work in the whole range of dairy effort which is calculated to increase the profits of dairy farming to the same extent, as is this matter of the improvement of dairy herds. In order to serve the purpose properly the work of record keeping must be persistent and continuous, and followed up by intelligent action on the part of the owners of the cows in the matter of breeding and selection.

Our records show that the average yield of milk in Ontario and Quebec is not much over 3,000 lbs. of milk per cow per annum, yet we find herds of 20 cows and over that average 5,000 lbs. In every instance the herds which show a high average of production have been built up by just such methods as the cow testing associations are intended to promote.

The members of the different associations have had an excellent opportunity of comparing the records from the different sections, and of finding herds in the various associations.

With a view of promoting correspondence between the various members of the associations, I am authorized by the Dairy Commissioner to announce that the name and post office address of the owner of any herd in the records will be given to any person who applies for it to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa. The idea is that members may learn from the owners of profitable herds as to the methods by which such satisfactory results have been reached. We think the correspondence idea might be very properly included as a feature of this work. We trust that owners of these first class herds will be good enough to answer such inquiries in a broad-minded and helpful manner.

It is to be hoped that the members of the associations will not become slack in keeping the records as the season advances, because it must be remembered that unless a full record for the whole milking period has been made, a portion of it will be of very little value.

Members of this association must not overlook the importance of the feeding question. This has been touched upon but very little so far in this work, but eventually we hope to see careful records kept of the amount of feed consumed by the cows.

We take this opportunity of again pointing out the desirability of the owners or managers of factories taking an interest in this work and making the cheese factory or creamery the centre for further organization for the purpose of keeping records and testing.

A large amount of correspondence has been received from individuals in localities where associations have not been organized, and many farmers are equipping themselves to do the testing on their own account. A copy of bulletin No. 9 entitled "Instruction for Testing Individual Cows" will be sent free to anyone who applies for it.

A Wonderful Record.

As made up by improved and exact processes Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. It cures the backache, periodical headaches, the dragging-down distress in the pelvic region, the pain and tenderness over lower abdominal region, dries up the pelvic catarrhal drain, so disagreeable and weakening, and overcomes every form of weakness incident to the organs distinctly feminine.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, the makers of which are not afraid to print their formula on the bottle wrapper, thus taking their patrons into their full confidence. It is the only medicine for women, every ingredient of which has the strongest possible endorsement of the most eminent medical practitioners and writers of our day, recommending it for the diseases for which "Favorite Prescription" is used. It is the only put-up medicine for women, sold through druggists, which does not contain a large percentage of alcohol, so harmful in the long run, especially to delicate women. It has more genuine cures to its credit than all other medicines for women combined, having saved thousands of sufferers from the operating table and the surgeon's knife. It has restored delicate, weak women to strong and vigorous health, where there was barrenness before, thereby brightening and making happy many thousands of homes by the advent of little ones to strengthen the marital bonds and add sunshine where gloom and despondency had reigned before.

Butler Wanted the Brief.

While E. C. Carrigan was in General B. F. Butler's law office a lady came in to ask some advice. As the general was not in, Mr. Carrigan questioned her and told her he would submit her case to the general, which he did.

The general was to leave the next day for Washington and told Mr. Carrigan to prepare a brief of the lady's case and show it to him the next day.

Mr. Carrigan sat up half of the night writing his brief. The next morning, about fifteen minutes before Butler was to take his carriage for the train, he told Mr. Carrigan he would look at his brief and give his opinion.

Mr. Carrigan began by saying: "General, I have made a most careful study of this case. I have the points all in my head and can state them to you in three minutes."

"Let me have the brief," again said the general, somewhat sharply.

"But, General Butler," said Mr. Carrigan, "I had a brief prepared and intended to show it to you, but I have left it at home on my table. However, as I said, I have all the points of the case in my head."

"Young man," said the general, "the next time you have a brief to prepare for me bring me the brief and leave your head at home on the table."—Boston Herald.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread-d disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

He Obeys Orders.
"Sir Henry Roscoe tells this of the scientist Faraday and his assistant, Sergeant Anderson: "Anderson was the sole assistant to Faraday and of course was utterly uneducated in scientific matters, but he could obey orders, which is not always a characteristic of an educated man. One day Anderson was told by Faraday to keep stirring a pot containing some chemicals over a fire until he returned, Faraday being in the habit of going upstairs to tea in his rooms and coming down directly afterward to work in the laboratory during the evening. For some reason he was prevented from coming down again and forgot that he had told Anderson to watch the pot. On coming down the next morning he found Anderson still stirring the pot, having been at it the whole night and thus carrying out the order which was given him."

The Circle County.
The oddest shaped county among the thousands which go to make up the separate divisions of the various states is Warren county, Tenn. It lies almost exactly in the geographical center of the state and is about as near a perfect circle as any division of land could possibly be. The circle would be perfect but for the fact that there is a short stretch of the northern boundary line which follows a small stream for a short distance. It is bounded by Cannon, Dekalb, Coffee, Grundy, Van Buren and White counties.

How Bees Gather Honey.
A bee gathers honey by the aid of its "trunk," "lower lip" or "tongue," which is used as an instrument for extracting the nectar from flowers. The "tongue" of a bee is not, as was once thought to be the case, a tube through which the juice is sucked, but is built more after the fashion of a fine broom. With this broom the bee brushes or laps the honey or honey material from the flowers, leaves, etc., and passes it down a groove in the upper surface of the tongue to the mouth proper. From that point the juice is conveyed through a minute orifice into the "first stomach," vulgarly called the "honey bag." The honey bag is a real chemical laboratory, where by some mysterious process which has not yet been explained by science the juices are converted into pure honey. When the chemical process of transforming the nectar into viscid honey has been completed the bee disgorges it into one of the cells made for the purpose of a receptacle. For years the microscopists and the entomologists have been studying the bee's laboratory, but its workings are at present among the unexplained mysteries.

Horses and Grass.
A famous veterinary surgeon declares that grass beats all the drugs in creation as a cure for sick horses and mules. Horses should have a few quarts of grass daily from spring until fall, he says. The prevalent notion that it is harmful is idiotic and cruel. Grass to horses is the same as fresh vegetables and fruit to us. Their craving for it proves their need of it. Yet ignorant, unfeeling drivers yank them away from it as if it was poison instead of the life giving medicine it is, designed by their Maker for them. When they gnaw the bark of trees or eat leaves it is because they crave grass and can't get it. Millions of bushels of grass go to waste yearly by the wayside which should be utilized for our noble, faithful, helpless, dumb colleague, the horse, thus making him healthy and happy. Summer visitors who hire horses should remember these facts and give the animals a chance to get at the grass by the roadside once in awhile.

mitted in the fashionable section of Baltimore. So anxious were the police authorities to apprehend the culprits that instructions were issued to the roundsmen to exercise extraordinary vigilance during their tours of inspection.

On one occasion just after midnight an officer saw emerging noiselessly from a house in Eutaw Place a young man, who hastily darted down the street. The officer made after him as rapidly as possible. When he had stopped the young man he said: "Didn't you come out of the corner house just now?"

The young fellow, though of quite a respectable air, seemed ill at ease. "I did," he answered, with some confusion.

"Do you live in that house?" sternly demanded the officer.

"That's an impertinent question," replied the young man in a tone of great indignation. "I don't see what business of yours it is so long as her father doesn't object."—Success Magazine.

Clock Inscriptions.
In former times it was the custom of clockmakers to inscribe on the dial plates of their clocks quaint verses, one of the most common being the following:

I serve thee here with all my might
To tell the hours by day, by night.
Therefore example take by me
To serve thy God as I serve thee.

Another favorite inscription was "Tempus Fugit" or "Time Flies," and thereby hangs a tale. A well known English clockmaker who flourished toward the close of the last century, on being asked by a customer whether a certain clock was of home manufacture, replied: "Oh, certainly. I don't you see the name, sir—Thomas Fugit! I often have his clocks through my hands."

TAKEN AT HER WORD

By JOANNA SINGLE

Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells

John Mason did not slam the gate simply because he knew that this manifestation of rage would surely delight Rosalie. She was watching his departure from the window, and he was angrily conscious that she knew he would, as usual, return in a few days, although she had said she hoped she would be rid of him for awhile. She was so young and so beautiful—and so provoking!

At the entrance to the little park, already growing green in the April sun, he met her sister. He did not know Anne very well—he had been too busy with Rosalie. He wished now that he had made friends with her; her blue eyes were so like and still so unlike Rosalie's. Anne stepped in front of him and stopped him unceremoniously.

"Been trampled upon again?" she observed. "John Mason, for so clever a man generally you're sometimes a awful—fool!" She submitted this thoughtfully, in a voice too gentle to be insulting.

"Then you and Rosalie are agreed, and I suppose you are expert testimony. May I turn and walk with you?"

She nodded and then asked a matter of fact question. "How many times has she refused you?"

"I had not thought to keep count. Rosalie just now informed me that this was the last time. I didn't know I had been the same sort of a—fool so often. But don't you think she ought to give me credit for my persistence? Not every man proposes so many times—to the same girl."

Anne laughed dryly as he continued: "I would have given up long ago if I were not unexplainably sure that she does—care for me. In fact, she never has said directly that she does not. She simply says she won't marry me. What's the matter with me? Am I too rich? I can give away the stuff if she likes. Am I too successful? I might lose a case to please her. Should I be as ugly as Satan? Perhaps she would like a Beauty and the Beast effect! What does she want? I've said and done everything under heaven, and she walks on me—she trails me!"

"Precisely! That's why I called you—what I did. A girl likes to trail a man, but hates the man that will be trailed. Not logical, is it? To use her own words, you are always around underfoot. You give her no time to want you or miss you or think about you. She's too sure of you. She knows just where you'll be. You never let her want anything bad enough to appreciate it when it comes. She has always had her own way. She needs to be a bit afraid of you. She needs to be bullied!"

He frowned. "I am not a brute. That is not my way."

"No? Well, what has your way accomplished?"

He tried to laugh. "Oh, I'll take your advice. I'll do anything you say. It can't be worse than it is now."

"Well, I hate the responsibility. If you get her you'll fight; if you don't, you'll both be miserable anyhow. You must get her—and then work out your own salvation. In the first place, you must give her a shock. Write her a note and accept your dismissal. Tell her you begin to see that she is right and that you wish to be friendly with her and the family. Then call sometimes—on the father or on me. Don't stay away. Absences of that sort are flattering; you must be quite unaffected by her presence."

"You know that is impossible. You know how the sight of her!"

"You've got to do it! And you must take another girl out occasionally. Being naturally modest, I dislike to suggest that you send me flowers sometimes and come for a walk with me. That will bring things home to her. A girl hates to have an admirer transfer himself bodily to any one, but especially to her sister."

When they had planned their campaign and he left Anne at the gate she had him laughing. Rosalie saw them and shrugged her shoulders. While removing her hat in the hall Anne remarked to her sister:

"Well, dear, John tells me that you have dismissed him for good. You know I never would have interfered if you had wanted him, but I am glad you do not. Now you may find time for your music. Your talent is too marked to be neglected. It will be a relief for you to have him out of the way awhile. You're too young to leave father and me, and, after all, I think you're right about his not being the right man for you."

Rosalie shrugged her shoulders. The next day Rosalie, without comment, handed Anne this note:

Dear Miss Carleton—I want to thank you for your frankness of yesterday, and I assure you that I shall not annoy you again as I have in the past. Can you forgive me for having troubled you so much and so long? You are probably right in deciding that I could not make you happy, as I hoped to be able to do. May I hope to continue my present friendly relations with you and the rest of the family? If I may, I will not again trespass on your kindness. It will be, as you said, the last time you shall have the pain of refusing. Yours sincerely,

JOHN MASON.

"Well, I like a man to know when he's had enough," remarked Anne. Again Rosalie shrugged her shoulders and made a very little face.

For a week Rosalie was blithe and busy with her music. The second week Anne observed that the gaiety was a bit forced and that during the third she moped a little. John had somehow kept the other men of her set away from her, and flowers and drives and theaters were less frequent. She had no time to miss him.

In the fourth week he called, while she was out. Of course she could not know that Anne had phoned him to come. He was leaving just as Rosalie entered and shook hands with her cordially. He did not look broken hearted, and he seemed to be on very good terms with Anne, to whom next morning he sent some violets. Rosalie saw him get walking with Mary Egan. Then he took Anne driving. She began to

Sherring of Marathon

TELLS HOW ZAM-BUK HELPED HIM

Wm Sherring of Hamilton, the world-famed winner of the Marathon race, the proud son of Canada, who side by side with the Crown Prince Constantine (who ran the finishing portion with him), came first to the Stadium at Athens in the great race, has since his return told how Zam-Buk, the great herbal balm, helped him bring the honor to Canada. Speaking to a Hamilton Herald representative, he said:

"While training for my great Marathon race at Athens I used Zam-Buk, and it proved a great boon to me. I have used it both as an embrocation and as a salve for chafing sores,

...on rapid Athens I used Zam-Buk and it proved a great boon to me. I have used it both as an emollient and as a salve for chafing sores, injuries caused by stepping on to stones while running in light shoes, and other such, and have found it the best salve and ointment I have ever tried. Its healing powers are exceptional, and for general household use it should be a wonderfully fine curative. I have pleasure in expressing my appreciation of its value."

Sherring is undoubtedly right, for as a household balm Zam-Buk has no equal. Zam-Buk is to be regarded as much a skin food as a medicine. When skin disease, such as eczema, ulcers, abscesses, running sores, etc., occur, the skin needs increased vigor to overcome the evil. Zam-Buk provides it. When you sustain a cut, a burn or a bruise, the surrounding tissue has to do extra work to overcome the damage. Zam-Buk helps it. Ever since the dawn of creation vegetable essences and extracts have been the proper sources of human medicine, and in Zam-Buk is found a blending of the finest herbal extracts it is possible to obtain.

Sufferers from any of the above mentioned skin diseases should give Zam-Buk a thorough trial. This universal balm is also a cure for chapped hands, chilblains, sore nipples, eczema, crumptions, itching, scaling sores, etc. It eases the pain and the itching of piles, and stops the bleeding. For skin rashes, ringworm or scalp sores, in children it is an effective remedy, and for all purposes to which a household balm may be put is unequalled. All druggists sell it at 50¢ a box or post free from the Zam-Buk Company, Toronto on receipt of price (6 boxes for $2.50). Write for free sample box sending one-cent stamp to pay return postage.

...and he seemed to be on very good terms with Anne, to whom next morning he sent some violets. Rosalie saw him get walking with Mary Ege. Then he took Anne driving. She began to realize that Anne was very pretty if she was a year or two older than John.

Rosalie's irritation reached its climax one morning at the breakfast table when her younger brother Ted remarked in a teasing drawl:

"John seems to be taking his medicine like a man, Rosy! He's all right, and I am glad Anne seems inclined to keep him in the family. He probably appreciates being treated like a human being after the way you always walked on him. The fellows say he's the best young lawyer in town. But I should think you'd hate to have him take his punishment so cheerfully, Rosy!"

By this time Rosalie had reached the limit of endurance. She sprang up and, before any one could interfere, had boxed Ted's ears soundly and fled to her room. No one made comment on the scene save that Mr. Carleton amusedly met the laughter in Anne's eyes and told Ted that he would have no more of his teasing. Rosalie's capricious treatment of John had long been disapproved of by her family, and, while they were all sorry for her, they thought it time she should come to her senses.

Time had been slow and torturing to John. He wanted to tell Rosalie that he loved her and her only. He wanted to send her flowers, to give her every desire of her heart, and he found it a misery to see her or not to see her. Meantime he was very attentive to Anne, who was becoming vastly bored with his raptures and sorrows and was longing for him to win his Rosalie and let her go back to her old peaceful ways.

At last one night Anne waked and heard Rosalie sobbing to herself. In the morning she pleaded headache and stayed in her room till nearly evening. Anne had a long conference by telephone with John and took pains to have her father and Ted spend the evening elsewhere.

After dinner she went to Rosalie's room and pleaded being tired. She coaxed Rosalie to arrange her pretty hair and don a pretty gown so she could go down if any one should come. While Rosalie was sulkily doing as her sister wished, Anne heard the bell and slipped down to answer it. She came back saying it was some one for her father and asked Rosalie if she would mind going to the library and bringing the book she had left on the table.

Rosalie, in her trailing blue dress, went downstairs and through the hall into the library. She had half crossed the room before she saw John sitting in a great chair in the dim firelight. She wanted to flee from him, but somehow her feet would not move, nor did she find a word to say. Then to her dismay she knew that a slow tear was falling down her cheek. John came quickly toward her. It seemed very comfortable to be leaning against him. After awhile he held her off and looked at her. She tried to smile.

"Well," he questioned, "how shall it be? You know you said you hoped you would never have to refuse me again. I hope you will not. Just for variety, suppose you—take me."

After the little minutes had cunningly slipped away and it was time that he should leave her, Rosalie exclaimed in dismay:

"Oh, Anne's book! She will be waiting for it."

"I hardly think so," John asserted dryly. "Your sister Anne is wise. She knew better than to expect you in a moment when she sent you down to me!"

"Sent me to you!" Rosalie echoed.

"Yes, my lady! Do you imagine your sister has been trailing me about for her pleasure? She is more glad to be rid of me than—ever you were!"

"Then—it was not—Anne—ever?"

John laughed and bade her good night.

"If you were not perfectly sure that it was 'not—Anne—ever,' you would never, never have asked me!" which both of them knew to be true.

And Anne went to bed and slept the sleep of one who has successfully performed an arduous duty.

Separations.

Why do we grieve at separations? Why do everlasting farewells chill our hearts, and the fading away of lost joys fill us with bitterness?

"Be not the slave of words," says Carlyle. "Is not the distant, the dead, while I love it and long for it and mourn for it, here in the genuine sense, as truly as the floor I stand on?"

And are not all good experiences thus forever a part of our lives? Can we therefore regret or mourn any past joy, any lost friend? Nothing is lost or gone from us that we have the spirit and capacity to appropriate and make our own forever. It is not the touch of body that makes presence. Have we not all known times when presence in the flesh brought no nearness, and again when the absent one seemed unspeakably near in spirit? So not to be within the actual physical sense, but to be able to appreciate and love the spirit of another, is the true association and communion. Hence our friends need never die, nor need we ever be parted from them.

Further, in order to realize them truly we need to be separated from them in the flesh at times. Else we shall grow to think them all body and forget that diviner, intangible, unnamable essence—the living spirit, the real self.—Exchange.

Reserve Buds.

Every one has noticed how, when a large branch of a tree is cut off, small branches will shoot out around the stump. These branches are from the reserve buds, of which all trees have a great number at every portion of their surface. Under ordinary circumstances these never come to maturity, but when the tree is wounded or cut off or loses some of its branches the reserve buds at once come into play and renew the foliage.

Fruit-a-tives

OR "FRUIT LIVER TABLETS"

Fruit-a-tives will cure the worst case of Chronic Constipation and Biliousness.

Because Fruit-a-tives are the true liver tonic. They strengthen and invigorate the liver—make the liver give up enough bile to move the bowels regularly. The bile is nature's laxative.

Fruit-a-tives are the finest Kidney and Bladder Remedy in the world.

Fruit-a-tives reduce inflammation and congestion—relieve the over-supply of blood—enable the kidneys to rid the system of waste—and thus prevent the formation of uric acid. Fruit-a-tives take away that pain in the back—and quickly cure irritated Bladder.

Fruit-a-tives completely cure Headaches and Rheumatism.

Headaches and Rheumatism both mean poisoned blood. Either the skin, kidneys or bowels are not ridding the system of waste matter. Fruit-a-tives invigorate and strengthen these organs—start up healthy, normal action—rid the system of poisons—and purify and enrich the blood. That means away with Headaches and Rheumatism.

Fruit-a-tives are the ideal tonic for everyone.

Fruit-a-tives build up, strengthen, invigorate. They sharpen the appetite—steady the nerves—enable one to sleep well—and keep the whole system in perfect health. They are fruit juices, concentrated and combined with tonics and internal antiseptics.

A FISHING CRAFT.

While it is rarely employed by Europeans as a method of travel, even in emergencies, the catamaran of the Madras fishermen of India is by all odds the most extraordinary of water vehicles. It consists simply of three logs lashed together and flush with the surface of the water. On these a fisherman (sometimes two or more fishermen) stands and with a single oar paddles himself far out to sea. A Madras fisherman will venture out when boatmen will not launch their craft, and even in weather when boats cannot be launched he will go through the surf and out to ships with letters, for the delivery of which he gets a few pence. In order to catch their ships a few belated travelers have been known to trust themselves on catamarans. They are united in the statement that the ride on the logs was the most nerve trying experience they had undergone in a land that holds a new thrill for the stranger at every turn. The sea and an occasional ducking have no terrors for these natives, not even the extremely young, and in reality the catamaran is not entirely to be scorned, for it is, after all, nonsinkable.

Faithful to His Friend.

Toole and Irving were friends from the days when they were both struggling beginners. On one occasion Irving was to be presented to Queen Victoria and was delighted at the honor. An officious court functionary took it upon himself to tell the player "not to mention this matter outside" lest other actors, such as Mr. Toole, might think that they should be presented too. "Let me tell you, sir," said Irving, "that Mr. Toole is not only a thoroughly renowned comedian; he is also a truly Christian gentleman. Toole often

Her Husband's Book.

"James, dear, will you bring me up a scuttle of coal from the cellar?" said a busy wife.

"That's just the way with you," said James, with a frown, as he put down his book and rose from the armchair.

"Just the way with me?"

"Yes!" he snapped. "As soon as you see me enjoying myself you have something or other for me to do. Didn't you see I was absorbed in my reading?"

"Well, dear, I will do it myself."

"Yes, and tell everybody, your mother especially, that you have to carry your own coal up from the cellar. No, I'll do it. Let me mark my place."

So he marked the place in the book at which he had ceased reading, and when he went down to the cellar, grumbling all the way, she picked up the volume and found it was a love story and that the passage he had been absorbed in was as follows:

"My darling, when you are my wife I will shield and protect you from every care. The winds of heavens shall not visit your face too roughly; those pretty hands shall never be soiled by menial tasks; your wish shall be my law; your happiness!"

Just then he reappeared and, dropping the scuttle upon the floor, said:

"There's your coal! Give me my book."—Tit-Bits.

Man and His "Galluses."

The "gallus" marks the freeman and the man of genuine, unpretending culture and civilization. Your snob and your savage abhor it. In Mesopotamia the wild bashi bazar wears a belt; in Yucatan the Indian wears a girdle of shark's teeth; in Senegambia the shameless cannibal sports a gunny sack; in Atlantic City some rags but the dukes used to wear sashes. But find a man who when he throws off his coat to begin his daily toil lays bare a pair of heavy sky blue galluses—and you'll find a man who pays his way in the world, loves his wife, rears his children in the fear of the Lord and votes the straight ticket. The "gallus" is useful. It is graceful, and properly adorned with hand painted flowers and brass buckles it is beautiful. To be ashamed of it, to conceal it or to abandon it for a somber leather belt is to fail in an essential of true manhood and fly in the face of fate.—Baltimore Sun.

The Unicorn.

The unicorn was one of the fabled monsters of antiquity. It was, according to a summary of the opinions of several of the old time writers, a beast about the size of a common horse, but with very short legs. The people of the middle ages believed in the existence of three kinds of unicorns—the magnificent white unicorn, which had a purple face and blue eyes and a single horn a yard in length; the e-dissior, which resembled a gigantic deer and had a very sharp horn growing from the middle of the forehead, and the monocoeros, or common unicorn. The white unicorn's horn was of three different colors—white at the lower part, black as ebony in the middle and red at the point. Certain writers were said to have had a unicorn of fifteen inches high, but they were so small that they could hardly lift an elephant.

FITSCURED

HIS WIFE'S LUNGS BOTH AFFECTED

But the Great Consumptive Preventative brought Health and Happiness to his Home

"Our doctor said there was no cure for my wife as both her lungs were affected," says Mr. L. H. Walter, of Pearl Street, Brockville, Ont. "It was a sad disappointment to us both, just starting out in life, only married a short time. But before she had finished the first bottle of Psychine the pain in her lungs quickly went away, and after taking six bottles Mrs. Walter was a new creature and perfectly well again."

That is just one of the many families into which Psychine has brought hope, health and happiness. It is a living proof that Psychine cures Consumption. But don't wait for Consumption. Cure your LaGrippe, your Cough, your Bronchitis, your Catarrh, or your Pneumonia with the remedy that never fails—

How a Firm of Architects Got Its Name on a Building.

Close observation on the part of a newspaper man in Boston several years ago revealed a striking device employed by the firm of McKim, Mead & White, the noted New York architects, of which Stanford White, who was murdered by Harry K. Thaw in New York recently, was a member. The device, says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, was an acrostic of names famous in history, literature and art by which the firm's name was to be engraved on the Boston Public Library. As may be observed, the arrangement defied literature, history and philosophy in arrangement, and this was the thing that attracted the newspaper man's attention. The names were conglomerated from all nations and ages into a seemingly neat ornamentation for the fine building. Beginning at the top of a space to be devoted to names famous in the world in various lines were the following:

Moses,
Cicero,
Kallidasa, Isocrates,
Milton.

These names, through their initials, formed the first part of the acrostic, spelling plainly "McKim." A slight space appeared before the next list of names, which was:

Mozart,
Euclid,
Aeschylus, Bante.

The initials of these names brought out the second name of the firm, "Mead." Another slight space, and the following names appeared:

Wren, Herick, Irving, Titian,
Erasmus.

Here was the name "White" also engraved, the whole device bringing out the firm name of "McKim, Mead & White" in connection with the world's famous men. It was in 1890, just before

The Hyacinth.

The hyacinth has its name from Greek mythology. According to the story as told by Ovid, Hyacinthus, a beautiful boy, was the son of a Spartan king and the favorite of Apollo. Zephyrus, being envious of the attachment of Apollo and Hyacinthus, so turned the direction of a quoit which Apollo had pitched while at play that it struck the head of Hyacinthus and slew him. The fable concludes by making Apollo transform the body of his favorite into the flower that bears his name.

A man had sixty ducks for sale and divided them into two lots of thirty each. One lot was to be disposed of at three for $1 and the other at two for $1. In his absence his clerk sold the sixty ducks at five for $2, realizing the sum of $24. If sold according to instructions one purchaser would have got thirty ducks for $15 and the other thirty for $10, making $25 for the lot. What became of the missing dollar?

No Nonsense.

"The Elizabethan ruff is likely to return," said Ma Twaddles, looking up from the fashion paper she was reading.

"If he does," responded Pa Twaddles, with energy, "you set the dog on him. Do you hear?"

Why.

"Oh," she said, "your conduct is enough to make an angel weep!"

"I don't see you shedding a tear," he retorted, and his ready wit saved the day.

Same Old Way.

Robert—When I get into my new house I mean that everything shall go like clockwork. Richard—I see; the same as heretofore—tick, tick!

Madame Hester, the famous Prince Donna, who, after a tour through the States, was summoned to stand before the King at Backingham Palace, has recently reaped great benefit from Bileans. In the course of an interview with a leading journalist, she said:—"I was often subject to liver trouble and indigestion, and the usual remedies seemed quite inadequate and gave me no relief. I saw a report about Bileans one day and thought I would give them a trial. The result of the treatment was as surprising as it was pleasing. I felt quite a new woman. Bileans are so delightfully easy to take, too, and one has not to go through a long weary course before reaping benefit. I am now recommending Bileans frequently to friends and patients." Bileans is a household remedy of an unvarnished merit. The reason think that they should be preserved too. "Let me tell you, sir," said Irving, "that Mr. Toole is not only a deservedly renowned comedian; he is also a truly Christian gentleman. Toole often saved me from adversity, perhaps starvation, when I was unknown. If John L. Toole is not worthy to be presented to her most gracious majesty, neither is Henry Irving. I wish you good day, sir!"—London Standard.

Water Pipes and Freezing.

Housekeepers as a rule do not understand why it is the hot water pipe is the first to freeze in very cold weather. They think that it ought to be the other way around—that hot water ought to withstand the low temperature longer than cold water will. That does seem reasonable, but a little investigation shows us that it is not. Hot water freezes more quickly than cold water for several reasons. In the first place, the boiling of water expels the air from it, and water will not freeze until it has parted with its air. In the second place, there is always a slight agitation on the surface of hot water, and this promotes congelation by assisting the crystals to change their position until they assume that most favorable to solidification. Then the particles in hot water divide into smaller globules by reason of the heat, and less resistance is therefore offered to the cold than in cold water.

Healthfulness of Honey.

"Honey, one of the most nutritious and delicate of foods, should be eaten more than it is," said a cooking expert. "Bought in the comb, it is bound to be unadulterated, and this pure honey will keep its friends free from sore throat and bronchial troubles. I have not had a sore throat since six years ago I took to eating honey. My doctor tells me he often recommends honey, with excellent results, for diseases of the throat. Honey is excellent to use instead of sugar for sweetening cakes. It gives the cakes a most delightful flavor. It is also excellent in place of butter on hot biscuit, on toast and on buckwheat cakes. I know a number of women who use honey as a cosmetic. They apply it to the skin, rub it in well, then wash it off with hot water. The result is a finer textured complexion, a glowing color, a young, fresh look."

Instinctive Piety of the Irish Gael.

As Dr. Douglas Hyde pointed out, "the Irish Gael is pious by nature. There is not an Irishman in a hundred in whom is the making of an unbeliever. God is for him assured, true, intelligible. When he meets a neighbor, instead of saying 'Bon Jour' or 'Good morning' he says 'God salute you.'" Indeed, all the ordinary invocations and salutations of the Irish language are governed by this religious feeling. "When he takes snuff from you he will say, 'The blessing of God be with the snuff of your dead.' If a sudden wonderment surprises him he will cry, 'A thousand laudations to God,' and if he is shown a young child or anything else for the first time he will say, 'Prosperity from God on it.'"—London Spectator.

Lava.

Lava may be blown into opaque bottles of gossamer lightness, and the harder sort makes a beautiful green glass of half the weight and double the strength of ordinary glass. But it is not always the same. Every volcano pours out its own special brand of molten mixture, disagreeable to walk on, but sometimes yielding precious products, as pumice stone. Lava, like all things, decomposes under the touch of time, as the fertile plains of Sicily testify.

Ancient Glass.

SUFFERING THE SURE PENALTY

Health Thus Lost Is Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well and strong? We hear every day the same story over and over again. "I do not feel well; I am so tired all the time!"

More than likely you speak the same words yourself, and no doubt you feel far from well. The cause may be easily traced to some derangement of the female organs which manifests itself in depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or do anything, backache, bearing-down pains, flatulency, nervousness, sleeplessness or other female weakness.

These symptoms are but warnings that there is danger ahead, and unless heeded a life of suffering or a serious operation is the inevitable result.

The never-failing remedy for all these symptoms is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Clara Beaubien, of Beaufort, Quebec, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham: "For several years I have suffered with a female weakness which proved a serious drain on my vitality, sapping my strength and causing severe headaches, bearing-down pains and a general worn-out feeling, until I really had no desire to live. I tried many medicines, but did not get permanent relief until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In two months I was much better and stronger, and in four months I was well; no more disagreeable discharge, no more pain. So I have every reason to praise the Vegetable Compound, and I consider it without equal for the ills of women."

For twenty-five years Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, has under her direction and since her decease, been advising sick women free of charge. Her advice is free and always helpful. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Mr. Alfred Pleau, an expert machinist, 178 St. John Street, Quebec City, Can., writes:

"Two years ago, an accident necessitated my confinement for several weeks. The good health I had enjoyed was slipping away and there developed a complication of diseases. My physician said my case was one of general debility.

"Among the many ailments which developed was a serious attack of catarrh, which annoyed me considerably and kept me awake whole nights.

"I decided to give Peruna a trial and soon found it acting as a wonderful tonic to my system. The catarrh grew less severe and shortly after ward disappeared, as did also the various other maladies.

"I attribute my prompt relief and ultimate cure entirely to the use of Peruna and gladly recommend it."

ENTERPRISE.

Potato digging is the order of the day. The crop is not as good as it might be in some localities.

Mr. Cornelius Clancy has disposed of his beautiful and convenient place to Mr. Levi Card, who has taken possession, and is busily engaged tilling it.

Mr. Edgar Kearns still continues very low, slight hopes are held for his recovery.

Quite a number from the village and surrounding country, attended the fair at Tamworth on the 22nd inst. But were put to some inconvenience, on account of the heavy downpour of rain in the evening.

The supply of milk going to our factory has fallen quite short of the average on account of the dry spell which dried up the pastures.

THE RING OF SINCERITY

The True Man Would Rather Be a Sincere Sinner Than a Hypocrite.

"Good master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" Matt. xix., 16.

Religion rises within; it is not applied from without. Therefore it is an individual matter, and its manifestations bear individual characteristics. There never yet were two living things exactly alike. Only a dead creed can be shaped into uniformity. A man's religion will be manly, a woman's womanly, a boy's boylike.

Yet, strange to say, the religion whose greatest teacher was greatest of all as a man almost universally has given emphasis to the womanly type of character. It too often has demanded of the men who would follow the man of Nazareth that they should conform to the type of Mary of Bethany, with the result of creating the impression in the world that in a man faith meant effeminacy.

But the men who long ago followed the great teacher were by no means weak or womanly. Clear cut conceptions of their rugged virility have come down to our day. The Master won men by His manliness. His life and words led them into nobler, stronger manhood. And men came, like Nicodemus and the rich young ruler, not juggling a promise of paradise or looking for the philosophy, but seeking His secret of the enduring, satisfying, full life.

The inquiry of the young ruler has in it the elements of every true man's religion;

THE PASSION FOR TRUTH,

the desire for action, and the worship of the ideal. Like him, men seek the teacher who shall show them truth; they ask not so much for things to know as for things to do; they set before themselves the ideal of the life that endures.

Every true man seeks truth. To him he false whether in word or deed; the lie, the worst of all sins. No religion can meet his needs unless it sets his first of all, truth before tradition, before timeserving, at any cost.

The man who asked for the truth concerning himself, his past, this world, its story and laws, who refused to take kindly the legends of long ago no matter how venerable their testators, who turned to science saying, Show us the naked truth, was not seeking to destroy religion; he was but giving expression to his own religion as a man.

It was not irreverence that made him bring the elaborate structures of past thinkers to crumbling ruins in the dust; it was but reverence for that which is holier than their tradition, truth, the object of his search. He overturns some ancient error, not to gloat at its falsehood and pretence, but to glory in the truth thus brought nearer.

The true man demands truth in the expression of religion. He rather would be a sincere sinner than a holy hypocrite. Men never are to be won to any faith by fooling them. But they will listen to any voice having the inimitable ring of sincerity. The preachers who are debating how to get men to church would answer their own questions if they would only be natural, forgetting professionalism, phrases, and phylacteries, and being just their own selves for a few months.

THE RICH YOUNG MAN

Wanted to know what he could do; the man of to-day must express his faith in action. If religion only be catechisms and contemplations it never will content men. They were not made for that sort of thing exclusively; it takes a long while to train a man away from action and make him satisfied with the life of the ideal milliner minister, and fortunately the modern minister again is rebelling; he, too, demands room to move and do.

The finest, noblest things within us die if we continue to weep over this world's woes and lament its injustice without lifting a hand to soothe sorrow or right wrong. The business of the church in this world is to touch men with such emotions, fill them with such aspirations that they shall go out from the meeting to clean the market, to lift the burdens of the oppressed and build up the broken in heart.

There is a religion for a man; it has been writing its records not in priests' books alone, but in all the story of our progress, both in wars and in works of tenderness and good. It is the spirit that makes us forsake our slothful ways, endure hardships, strive, toil, and suffer that somehow we may serve our world, that leads us, often perhaps unwittingly, to follow him who went about doing good.

Lesson I. The Two Great Commandments. Golden Text: Mark 12. 30.

THE LESSON WORD STUDIES.

Note.—The text of the Revised Version is used as a basis for these Word Studies.

Mark's Record of Passion Week.—Our lesson passage for to-day picks up the record of Mark's narrative where we stopped it in the lesson of Sunday, September 16, in which the triumph of Jesus over the Pharisees and Sadducees, answering their subtle questions concerning tribute money and the resurrection was recorded. The order of events of passion week as recorded by Mark it is well to keep in mind. It follows: Sunday—The Triumphal

40. And for a pretense.—Or, even while for a pretense. In verses 38-40 Mark has summed up very briefly Christ's rebuke of the Scribes which in Matthew is given in much fuller form, together with additional explicit warnings against the Scribes and Pharisees. (Comp. Matt. 23).

41. The treasury.—Money chests with trumpet-shaped mouths for receiving voluntary contributions of the worshippers were placed under the colonnades of the court of the women in the temple. These chests were thirteen in number and were referred to as the treasury of the temple.

42. Two miles.—The mile was the smallest copper coin in use. Its value was about two-fifths of a cent, which was approximately one-fortieth of the daily wage of an ordinary laborer. A contribution of two miles was the smallest amount which could lawfully be put into the temple treasury.

43. Cast in more than all they that are casting in.—A suggestion that God's standards of action and of value differ from those of men.

MOST REMARKABLE FEAT

A PEDESTRIAN WHO WALKED 100 MILES IN A DAY.

A Wonderful Performance by Mr. Edward Weston at the Age of 68.

To walk at the age of sixty-eight, a distance of over a hundred miles within twenty-four hours is a feat of which anyone might be proud, and it is not to be wondered at, therefore, that to-day Mr. Edward Payson Weston, the only man of his age who ever accomplished it, is a happy man. Mr. Weston's little trip was from the City Hall, Philadelphia, to the City Hall, New York, a distance of 106 miles, which he completed in the remarkable time of twenty-three hours and thirty-three minutes. Just forty-three years ago the veteran pedestrian performed a similar feat, but, though a young man at the time, he took exactly twenty-three minutes longer in accomplishing his task, and this in spite of the fact that the two city halls were some four miles closer together than they are to-day.

Mr. Weston left Philadelphia City Hall at five minutes past twelve on a recent Wednesday, determined, if possible, to break his record of forty-three years ago. He wore knickerbockers, a white shirt, gait stockings, and a pair of strong leather walking shoes. His hat was the identical narrow brimmed straw which he has worn in all his pedestrian feats, while the light cane he carried was the one which has accompanied him in his record-breaking tramps during the last half-century. In a carriage, following the pedestrian were three Philadelphian doctors.

In his long tramp Mr. Weston took the same route that he did in 1863, walking to New Brunswick, N. J., a distance of sixty-five miles without a single stop. There he slept for thirty minutes, and then took the road to Newark, where he arrived at 9:14 p.m. From there he went to Jersey City, where the Pennsylvania Railroad had a ferry-boat at the slip awaiting his arrival. As soon as the old man made his appearance he was hurried on board, and the ferry was off in record time. Mr. Weston reached Cortland Street, New York, at 11:12 p.m., and immediately proceeded to the City Hall by way of Greenwich and Vesey Streets and Park Row. He only stopped a moment at the City Hall, for his goal was Fifth Avenue Hotel, which he had made up his mind to reach before midnight—accomplishing his object with a good margin.

At the Fifth Avenue Hotel there was such a tremendous crowd that the popular hero could scarcely make his way into the hotel. From the ferry, however, he had been accompanied by several policemen, mounted and on foot, and these guardians of the peace and order soon forced a way for the tired pedestrian, who was escorted to his bedroom by his physicians and a few friends. There he was subjected to a medical examination, after which he took a salt water bath and went to bed.

The following morning Mr. Weston rose at his accustomed hour—eight o'clock—and soon afterwards was seen by the writer, to whom he gave a few particulars regarding his latest feat. Mr. Weston is a tall, athletic-looking man, in spite of his sixty-eight years, and there was no trace of fatigue apparent in his cheerful countenance as he sat in the vestibule of the Fifth Avenue Hotel and talked about his pedestrian feats past and present.

"I felt so fresh at the end of my last trip," he said, "that I believe I could do the same journey with a night's rest. The most trying part of the trip was during the middle of the day, when the sun was beating on my head and almost making me fear a stroke. But it soon passed, and the cool of the evening greatly revived me. In places the roads

THE DESIGNING KITTY FARQUHAR

Always when Professor Warburton came home he searched through all his pockets for his latch-key, failed to find it and seemed mildly surprised.

To-day, as usually, he muttered an abstracted "Dear, dear!" and went round to the back door.

In the kitchen he found a slim young person tugging frantically at a huge kettle the contents of which showed unmistakable signs of boiling over.

The Professor grasped the situation and simultaneously the kettle, and transferred the latter from the range to the kitchen table. Then he turned his attention to the guardian of the kettle who stood ruefully regarding a blistered finger.

The professor recalled now that his sister had mentioned at breakfast that she was expecting someone. Celia was always expecting people. They came in droves and swarms—or so it seemed to the professor, who liked quiet and solitude—filled the house with an unwelcome chatter and an unseemly swishing of silk petticoats, and in the end fluttered away again.

The professor had taken it for granted that the new arrival would be a guest. It was a relief to find her merely the new cook. Moreover, she seemed a distinct improvement over the old one, who had been, the professor vaguely recalled, a person built on the lines of a sack of meal.

He looked at her with increasing interest and approbation. She had thanked him prettily for his timely assistance with the kettle, and he felt it incumbent on him to convey to her that she was welcome in his household. But he hesitated, at a loss as to how he should address her.

"My good girl," he began, after a preliminary clearing of his throat.

"Kitty, sir."

"And a very nice name," said the professor approvingly. "Kitty, I trust you will like your situation."

Kitty veiled a pair of dancing brown eyes behind long-lashed lids and answered demurely, "Thank you, sir. Yes, sir."

Then the professor caught sight of the burned finger. "Oh," he cried, "you have hurt yourself."

"It's only a burn," said Kitty, in a tone of meek and patient resignation.

"But it ought to be tied up," the professor insisted.

He looked vaguely about the kitchen for something that might be made to do duty as a bandage. Finding nothing, he tore a strip from his handkerchief and wrapped it round and round the injured finger. When he had secured it with a length of string taken from one of the grocer's parcels the finger had attained such proportions that its owner was forced to fold the others in to the palm of her hand to make room for it; but the professor was satisfied.

"There is no hurry about luncheon," he said benignly. "And anything will do for me."

Kitty watched his tall, slightly stooping figure through the doorway. Then Miss Katharine Farquhar dropped into the chair beside the kitchen table and laughed till she cried.

She had just finished mopping her eyes when her hostess came in.

"Oh, you thought to take off the preserves," was that lady's greeting, "And they're just done and not a bit scorched. That's good. Well, cook's disposed of, thank heaven. She'll have to stay in the hospital six weeks at least, possibly longer. It's her knee-cap fractured, they say. Oh, the carelessness and ingratitude of servants—falling

Jesus over the Pharisees and Sadducees, in answering their subtle questions concerning tribute money and the resurrection was recorded. The order of events of passion week as recorded by Mark it is well to keep in mind. It is as follows: Sunday—The Triumphal Entry and Subsequent Retirement to Bethany (11. 1-11); Monday—The Cursing of the Fig Tree, the Second Cleansing of the Temple, and the Retirement at Evening to Bethany (11. 12-19); Tuesday—The Lesson of the Withered Fig Tree, the Deputation of the Sanhedrin, the Parable of the Wicked Husbandman, the Questions of the Pharisees, Sadducees, and that of the Scribe, the Counter-question of Jesus, the Lesson of the Widow's Mite, and the Prediction of the Destruction of Jerusalem and the End of the World (11. 20-13. 37); Wednesday—Spent by Jesus in Seclusion at Bethany. The Compact of the Traitor (14. 1. 2. 10. 11); Thursday—The Events Connected with the Celebration of the Passover, the Agony in Gethsemane, and the Arrest of Jesus (14. 12-52); Friday—The Trials of Jesus, the Denial of Peter, the Crucifixion, Death and Burial (14. 53-15. 47); Saturday—Jesus in the Tomb (16. 1); Sunday (Easter Day)—Events Connected with the Resurrection (16. 1-20).

Verse 28. One of the scribes—One of those present during the discussion with the Pharisees and Sadducees, which had just preceded, and one, doubtless, who was pleased with the answer given by Jesus to those who sought to "take him in his speech." Apparently an earnest inquirer.

What commandment is the first of all?—A common question of debate among the Scribes and learned doctors of the law, and one of great importance in view of the superficial legal conception which the Jews had of the relation between God and man. They seem to have imagined that God kept some sort of a balance sheet on which was recorded the record of each man's obediences and disobediences with reference to each of the various commandments. The keeping of the all-important commandments was thus conceived as counterbalancing the omission of many lesser points of the law, and the concern of the Scribes was simply to get as large a balance as possible with Jehovah at the smallest expense of moral endeavor.

31. And no man after that durst ask him any question. This explanatory statement is placed by Matthew after the coming question of Jesus recorded in the next verses. The expression "after that" refers to the entire conflict with the Pharisees and Sadducees and the subtle questions that had been put to Jesus by different persons on this same occasion.

32-37. These verses, while not included in our lesson text, should be studied as part of the lesson. They include the account of the manner in which Jesus still further augmented his triumph over the Pharisees and Sadducees by asking them the unanswerable question concerning David's relation to Christ. It will be well to read Matthew's account, Matt. 22. 41-46, which is somewhat fuller and records some details omitted by Mark.

38. In his teaching he said—Luke points out that it was "in the hearing of all the Scribes." Jesus proceeds to warn the people against their false religious leaders—these very men with whom he had been disputing, and who were still within hearing of his voice. They had come to "catch him in talk" and discredit him as a teacher in the eyes of the multitude. But they had been utterly routed, and were now forced to listen to a most scathing rebuke of the whole class of men to which they belonged. It was they instead of Jesus who were discredited as teachers in the eyes of the common people.

Long robes—The professional garb of teachers of the law.

Salutations in the market places—Formal salutations given in recognition of the honorable state or official position of the person thus saluted.

be put into the temple treasury. 43. Cast in more than all they that are casting in—A suggestion that God's standards of action and of value differ from those of men.

Interesting Gossip About Some Prominent People.

Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema's first great picture was exhibited at Antwerp, and was offered as one of the prizes in a lottery. The lucky winner was the King of the Belgians.

The oldest magistrate in the Empire has just died. Captain Edward Durnesq was made a J.P. in Tasmania in 1828—that is, two years before William IV. came to the throne. He had reached the great old age of 104.

Lord Cromer is such an industrious man in Egypt that he rarely accepts an invitation to dinner, in order to maintain his strength and to get through his day's work he has to go to bed early and to rise at about six in the morning.

The King of Siam has a bodyguard composed of 400 female warriors. At the age of thirteen they enter the Royal service and remain in it until they are twenty-five, when they pass into the reserve. Their weapon is the lance, and they are splendidly trained in the use of it.

Queen Alexandra enjoys the distinction of being the only Sovereign in modern times to wear the look as a floral emblem at a State function. The wild look, which flourishes profusely on the coast of Glamorgan, has been regarded as the national emblem of Wales, and it was as such that Queen Alexandra wore it at a Drawing Room which she held some years ago on St. David's Day.

One of the hobbies of the King of the Belgians is building. King Leopold, who spends almost as much time out of his country as he does in it, has several residences which he seldom or never visits, yet he is constantly adding to them. He has a fine palace in Brussels, but when within his own domains he prefers to spend his time in the country. His Majesty is the richest monarch in Europe so far as real estate is concerned.

Despite his years, which number sixty-two, Sir Charles Dilke is one of the most active members of the House of Commons. An enthusiastic sculler, he goes through a course of training every year. His week-ends during the Session he spends on the Thames at Shepperton, where, on Saturdays, accompanied by a powerful oarsman, he is frequently to be seen pulling hard in a doudie-scuttler. Fencing is another of Sir Charles's exercises.

The full name of a bride married at Ham Common, near Richmond (Surrey), England, was Miss Lyonella Fredegunda Cultherga Ethelwytha Ideth Ysabel Grace Monica de Orellana Plantagenet Tollemeche. She is a niece of the Earl of Dysart. Canon Benham officiated at the ceremony, and in order to correctly give the bride's names during the service he had taken the precaution to write them down on a slip of paper, to which he referred.

Sir Evelyn Wood has said that one of his narrowest escapes happened to him in the Crimea. He was climbing over a parapet, when a private soldier forced his way in front of him, and turned round savagely when his officer, who was much exhausted, caught hold of the butt of his rifle in order to pull himself up. At that moment the man was pierced through the heart by a bullet from the Russian lines, while Wood, whose place he had taken, remained unhurt.

Lord Aberdeen's sons, the Hon. Dudley and the Hon. Archie Gordon, have strongly developed mechanical aptitudes and worked for a time as ordinary apprentices in one of the big shipbuilding yards at Aberdeen, being treated in exactly the same way and leading the same hard, healthy life as the other lads. Doubtless they have inherited their taste in this matter from their father, who is one of the most expert amateur locomotive engine-drivers in the three kingdoms.

the same journey with a night's rest. The most trying part of the trip was during the middle of the day, when the sun was beating on my head and almost making me fear a stroke. But it soon passed, and the cool of the evening greatly revived me. In places the roads were very rough and the walking heavy, but I kept up a good average of four and a half miles an hour, and soon after I started I felt sure I should beat my record of 1863. The doctors who followed me in the carriage were afraid that I might succumb, and were constantly pulling up alongside to have a look at me; but, bless you, I outwalked three pairs of horses, and sometimes they had to trot to keep up with me!—and the veteran gave a hearty laugh. "The only diet I took on the journey," continued the pedestrian, "consisted of eggs and milk, and I consumed quarts of that refreshing beverage. You know I am a teetotaler, and I think it is due in a measure to my abstemious habits that I was able to accomplish the long journey with a minimum amount of fatigue. The only discomfort I felt was when the constant walking created a few water blisters on the soles of my feet, but they have already healed up, and I feel as right as rain. I took my foot while I walked, but when I arrived at the City Hotel, in New Brunswick, I threw myself on a bed which had been made for me on the floor, took a short nap, and then drank a refreshing cup of tea. When I left the hotel I felt as though I could accomplish twice the distance I had in front of me.

"The longest walk I ever accomplished was in 1870, when I walked 5,000 miles in 100 consecutive days. This was an average of fifty miles a day, and I assure you it is not easy to keep it up for more than fourteen weeks. But I did it, and, though at the end I was glad to take a long rest, the walking did not distress me very much. In 1874 I accomplished a very satisfactory bit of walking—better even than my journey yesterday—viz., 115 miles in twenty-four hours. Seven years before that I walked from Portland, Me., to Chicago, Ill., about 1,500 miles in twenty-five days. In 1874 I walked 500 miles in six days, and five years later I won the Astley belt from the English pedestrian by walking 550 miles in six days.

"I have always been fond of walking and I think it is the finest exercise in the world. A good long walk is better than a month in a gymnasium, and I believe it is a good deal due to lack of this kind of exercise that consumption and other kindred ills are so rampant. A man who takes daily walks in the country cannot fall a victim to any pulmonary disease, and if medical men would only preach this gospel, I believe thousands of valuable lives might be saved. I do not remember when I had a day's illness, and my good health I ascribe entirely to my fondness for walking. Although I am nearing the allotted span of life, I feel as lively as a school boy, and if I live to seventy I intend trying to beat my hundred-mile record—and I think I'll do it."

WOULD DO FOR OMELETTES.

Two Irishmen driving through the country noticed that many of the barns had weathervanes in the shape of huge roosters.

"Pat," said one man to the other, "can you tell me why they always have a rooster and never a hen on the top of them barns?"

"Sure," replied Pat, "an' it must be because av the difficulty they'd have in collecting the eggs."

ed. That's good. Well, cook's disposed of, thank heaven. She'll have to stay in the hospital six weeks at least, possibly longer. It's her knee-cap fractured, they say. Oh, the carelessness and ingratitude of servants—falling down the cellar stairs just when she knew she was most needed?"

Kitty Farquhar laughed. "Poor thing," she said. "You surely don't think she did it on purpose." Then she asked, "Who was that gentleman came through here a few moments ago?"

"Mason, I suppose," said Mason's sister indifferently. "He probably forgot his latch-key. Generally he does."

"He was very kind," said Kitty. "He lifted the kettle off the range for me, and tied up my finger. I burned it."

Mrs. Hartman stared at her. "Mason lifted the kettle off the range for you, and tied up your finger?" she said. "Mason!"

Kitty begged to giggle. "I believe he thought I was the cook," she said. "He said he hoped I'd like my situation. And that there was no hurry about lunch; anything would do for him."

"Mason!" ejaculated Mrs. Hartman again. "Mason!"

"Celia," said Kitty Farquhar sharply, "what on earth is the matter with you? You act like a person in a trance."

"And I feel like one," said Mrs. Hartman. "Kitty, if Mason mistook you for the cook, you'll just have to be the cook, that's all."

"You're crazy, Celia Hartman," said Kitty, her voice rising in a shrill crescendo of astonishment. "I can't cook. I don't know how."

"That makes no difference," said Mrs. Hartman. "I'll try to stand it. And Mason never knows what he is eating anyway."

"But why, why," persisted the amazed Kitty, "should I be your cook?"

"Because," said Mrs. Hartman, "you are the only woman who has ever made Mason sit up and take notice. He saw that burn on your finger"—Mrs. Hartman's eyes were fixed on the very obvious evidence that such was the case—"and once I went around for two weeks with my arm in a sling and he never noticed it at all. I've had all sorts and conditions of women here to visit, and I don't believe he ever so much as learned their names."

"He said," observed Kitty, "that my name was a nice one."

"That settles it," said Mrs. Hartman, decidedly. "After that I'd simply not dare to present you to him as my guest and dearest friend. He'd be so embarrassed because of what he'd done, that he'd crawl right back into his shell, and we wouldn't be able to pry him out, not even with a crow-bar. Right here in this kitchen you'll stay, Kitty Farquhar, and let the good work go on."

"But," Kitty protested weakly, "it doesn't seem quite fair too—"

"Mason!" Mrs. Hartman finished. "Oh, yes, it is. He's fair game I tell you. Why, Kitty, a love affair would be the making of him. The man who hasn't been in love with at least one woman isn't human. And Mason is just barely aware that we exist."

Kitty Farquhar looked down at her bandaged finger and smiled a wise little smile. Professor Mason Warburton she thought, had been very much more than aware of her existence. And it is always pleasant to demonstrate that one can do what no one else can. "Celia," she said, "I'll do it. But if you have to choose between starvation and dyspepsia don't you blame me."

II.

Professor Warburton no longer made search through his pockets for his latch-key. That was a needless formality. Nor did he ring the bell as his sister had once or twice intimated he might. He went direct to the back door. And to accomplish the distance between kitchen and dining-room require more time than to come from the college where he lectured.

He filled coal buckets and acquired a taste for splitting firewood—Mrs. Hartman had maliciously ordered it delivered in chunks. The two conspirators watched him with delighted giggles, and they received his somewhat elaborate and overdone explanation to the effect that the exercise aided his digestion, with appreciative though sur-reptitious nudges.

Twice he asked his sister to replace a missing button on his coat, and occasionally his tie began to be approximately in the place where a well-regulated tie ought to be.

He gave Kitty books to read, and told his sister in confidence that, considering her lack of advantages, she seemed a remarkably intelligent young woman. Celia thought of the money that had been lavished on her friend's education and smiled, but said nothing.

In the beginning Kitty had every night conscientiously given Mrs. Hartman a resume of the day's happenings. Later on she grew exasperatingly uncommunicative.

"It's not half as much fun as I thought it was going to be," Celia complained. "Why can't you tell me what's going on?"

"There's nothing to tell," Kitty said. But she had the grace to blush hotly.

Mrs. Hartman's eyebrows went up. "Nothing to tell," she said. "And you two shut up alone together in the kitchen till all hours of the night?"

"We're just—reading," said Kitty, feeling herself put on the defensive.

"Well, it's dreadfully dull for me," said Mrs. Hartman, who seemed to have more than one grievance. "Mason at his best is about as lively as an undertaker in the discharge of his duties and he's no more company than the tables and chairs. I asked you here because I wanted someone to talk to, someone to go about with me, and you don't do a thing but shut yourself up in that everlasting old kitchen."

"You suggested it," Kitty reminded her. "It was your plan, you know it was."

"But I didn't suppose," said Mrs. Hartman, "that you'd be so terribly in earnest about it. Twice I've caught you studying, actually studying the cook book, and you're positively ruining your complexion over the range."

"I'm learning to cook," Kitty explained with dignity.

"But my dear child, it isn't necessary. As I told you before, I can stand it, and Mason never knows what he eats."

"The other night," said Kitty, "he said the dumplings were good, and they were like leaden bullets, only bigger. It's a sin and a shame to cheat him so. I'm going to make him dumplings that are dumplings."

Mrs. Hartman stared at her. She opened her mouth to say something, then thought better of it and closed it again. At last she thought she understood.

III.

Professor Mason Warburton had just proposed to his sister's cook. It was quite within the bounds of probability that the young woman had anticipated the said proposal, and certainly she ought to have been, in a measure, at least, prepared for it. But now that it was come upon her she hesitated, and looked down, twisting her apron string between a nervous thumb and finger.

"But I'm not really a cook, you know," she murmured at last in a very small, shy voice. Her eyes after so damaging a confession refused to meet the professor's. "I—I'm just your sister's friend," she supplemented. "And I've been playing at make-believe." There was a hint of tears in her voice.

"That," said the professor magnanimously, "is a mere detail. So long as you are you, it doesn't matter who you are."

But Kitty appeared not to be so greatly comforted as she should have been. "I—I can't marry you," she said in a very low voice.

"Don't you love me—Kitty?" The professor's voice lingered caressingly over her name.

Kitty choked back a rising sob. "I do," she said. "And it's for that very reason I can't marry you. Oh, I've done such a hateful thing. You know that first day when you lifted the kettle off the stove for me and tied up my finger?"

SOME GRAPE RECIPES.

Grape Juice.—Wash and pick from the stems a twenty-pound basket of blue grapes, crush and scald in an enamelled kettle, until the skins separate from the pulp. Strain through a jelly bag without squeezing. The pulp may be mixed with a quart of hot water and left to drip a second time. Return all the juice to the fire in a clean pot with from two to four pounds of sugar, according to taste, bring just to boiling point, skim thoroughly, pour into bottles or gem jars and seal while hot. If bottles are used soak the corks in hot water, drive them down tight with a heavy stick, cut the tops off flush with the top and dip in melted sealing wax.

Grapes in Cream.—To serve grapes in cream the fruit must be both ripe and sweet. Detach the grapes from the stems and seed them through a small slit cut in the side. They are then dredged with powdered sugar, and are covered with whipped cream. Another whipped cream recipe calls for the use of the grape-juice alone. To obtain the juice, boil the fruit in just enough water to keep it from burning, until the grapes are soft, then strain the juices and pulp through a fine strainer, and sweeten. This is made into a jelly with the use of gelatine. When thoroughly chilled it is removed from the mould and is covered with the well-beaten cream.

Grape Sherbet.—Any kind of grapes may be used in making the sherbet, the darker varieties giving, of course, the deepest color. Stem and wash thoroughly, place in a kettle with a cupful of water and heat slowly until the pulp will separate readily from the seeds. Turn into a colander and let drip, then press slightly, to obtain the tender part of the pulp. Measure, and to a pint add one pint of sugar, or rather less than this if the grapes are very sweet, and stir until dissolved. Add one cupful and a half of cold water, the strained juice of one lemon and freeze. When like mush open the freezer and stir in the white of one egg which has been beaten to a meringue with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Mix thoroughly and finish the freezing. Draw off a part of the brine, repack with more ice and salt, and set aside in a cold place for two hours to ripen.

SELECTED RECIPES.

Coldslaw.—After making cabbage soup take the portion of cabbage which has not been used. Shave it into fine slips, put it into a deep dish and pour over a dressing made in the following manner. Beat up two eggs, add one gill of vinegar and water mixed, place it over the fire; when it begins to thicken, stir in a piece of butter the size of a small walnut, a little salt, and a teaspoonful of sugar, when cold, pour it over the cabbage, and stir it together. Before sending to table sprinkle with a little black pepper.

Oyster Bisque.—To the liquor drained from a quart of oysters add water enough to make a full quart of liquid. Bring this to the boiling point. Chop the oysters and turn them into the heated liquor, then put all in a double boiler to cook gently while you cook together in another saucepan a quart of milk into which a pinch of baking soda has been stirred, and a half-cup of fine crumbs. When the crumbs are very soft, stir in two tablespoonfuls of butter rubbed into two of flour, and when the mixture is smooth and thick, pour it, stirring constantly, into the oyster liquid. Have ready beaten the yolks of three eggs. Take a cup of the soup from the fire, and beat it gradually into the eggs, and beat them into the soup in the saucepan, season, and serve at once.

Salsify Fritters.—Scrape the stalks of a bunch of salsify, and grate them fine.

kitchens are spotless, who pride themselves upon the immaculateness of house and person, will throw greasy water and slops just outside the kitchen door so that always that spot is a matter of offence to the nostrils. Or they will pour dishwater and greasy cooking water down the sink day after day, month in and month out, without ever objecting to the odor always hanging about the sinks, or ever doing ought to mitigate this nuisance.

Worse than this, they do not seem to recognize the peril that they harbor in their very midst. In such places lurk germs of all kinds awaiting only the favorable moment to spread disease. Because you have lived years thus, do not belittle the danger. The menace is always there. It but awaits the appointed time of favorable conditions to lay waste.

And it is all so needless in this day of cheap disinfectants and knowledge of their use! There is absolutely no excuse for foul odors about house or buildings. Whenever they exist they can be promptly and absolutely suppressed with the least possible effort and at an expense not worth the counting. Better still, with them will die the germs.

I wish I could make all housewives realize the value of liberal use of disinfectants around their kitchen sinks and dooryards. It is one of the simplest, surest health measures of which I know.

KEEPING ACCOUNTS.

Accuracy is in itself an accomplishment, and to those who are anxious to manage their affairs comfortably on a firm basis of integrity this precaution is indispensable as a protection against error.

One who keeps no accounts, who simply carries about with her a hazy recollection of amounts spent and amounts saved, soon will find herself involved in a labyrinth of perplexities. To recall with precision every detail of one's shopping expeditions, to balance outgo and income, without some simple system of bookkeeping involves an unnecessary degree of mental worry, and is an unwise waste of force.

One need not be an expert bookkeeper to set down every week in every month at the top of a page, the sums of money she receives from various sources—from her work if she be in business, from her profession if she be in art or literature, from father or husband if she be simply a lady living at home.

On the opposite page it is a simple matter to jot down the bills paid, the items at the several shops, the money given in subscriptions or charities.

Anybody who understands the first four rules of arithmetic can manage so uncomplicated a matter as the ordinary accounts of an ordinary family if she will only be methodical and adhere to her selected system, and observe a certain periodicity about the work, as for instance, never letting to-day's burden slip away upon to-morrow, and never leaving an unexplained deficiency no matter how small it is, until satisfactorily accounted for.

No greater check on spendthrift habits can be found than that which inheres in the conscientious keeping of accounts. The trifles run away with large sums. And until we really begin to watch with vigilance, we do not realize how the dimes and nickels aggregate into dollars.

FIERCE FIGHT WITH EAGLES.

A chamois hunter named Hess had a desperate fight with eagles, recently, on a narrow ledge overlooking a precipice in the mountains above Engelberg, Switzerland. He had located an eagle's nest, and climbed up alone with the object of capturing the young birds. About thirty yards from the nest he laid down his rifle, which hindered his movements. As soon as he reached the nest, in which were two eagles, the parent birds swept down from a neighboring height and fiercely attacked

ON THE FARM.

FALL ORCHARD PLANTING.

I advocate fall planting of orchards for the following principal reasons: The selection of trees in the nursery can be made more nearly to meet my requirements, both as to choice of varieties and to character of soil. Setting can be done at a season when general farm work is not especially pressing. Then, too, the trees are in place and gaining a foothold months before they otherwise would be if spring set, writes Mr. Grenville.

Some men are afraid to plant in the fall, because they think they may not be able to get the job done, or that the trees will not get a root hold, or will die during the winter, or will be girdled by mice or rabbits. If planting cannot be completed or even if none can be set, the trees can at least be heeled in for the winter and be ready for earliest possible spring setting. This will insure the advantage of choice selection if nothing else.

Trees can be set at any season, even midwinter and midsummer and yet do well. The percentage of loss is slight where proper care is taken. I know of a large orchard in western New York, where planting continued until the first weeks of December. The owner had previously been an opponent of autumn planting, but now declares in favor of it.

As for girdling, there is no more danger and even where it is permitted, the loss will be less felt than if the trees are older. But there is no reason why it should occur at all. By previously having nothing on the land that bark-gnawing animals feed on, there will be no bait, and by protecting the trunks there will be no chance of attack, even when such animals are present. Numerous things, such as blood and grease, have been suggested as repellents, but a positive protector is safer. Stiff manila or oiled paper or wire cloth are the most popular protectors. These are cut so as to wrap the trunk from an inch or so below ground up to 20 inches or even more, where large rabbits run wild. If prepared by rolling around a hay-fork handle, they can be most easily applied. Each should overlap at least half way round the trunk, and should be tied at top, bottom and middle.

Heeling in trees consists in covering roots, trunks and part of the tops with soil. A trench is dug on an elevated well-drained light soil with a straight side at right angles to the prevailing wind and about as deep as the roots extend from side to side, the soil being thrown to windward. On the leeward side the earth is pared down to make a long, gentle slope, so the trees may lie nearly horizontally.

When placed in position, either in bundles, as received from the nursery, or separately, the soil is sifted well among the roots and packed down. Nothing is easier. If I could not see my way clear to plant in the fall, I would still have my tree and shrub order filled in autumn and heel in the plants as thus described.

CORN FODDER.

The wide difference of opinion which exists in regard to the feeding value of corn fodder can be accounted for variously. The weather-beaten stalks in the husked fields are often eaten to the ground by horses, cattle and sheep, yet the properly cured corn plant contains far more nutriment. The forage part of dried fodder contains anywhere from one-third to one-half of the food value of the whole plant, making corn fodder not only a filler, but a nutritious forage.

Checked corn harvested late, with few leaves and heavy stalk, the substance of the plant having gone into the ear, possesses little feeding value

Kitty choked back a rising sob. "I do," she said. "And it's for that very reason I can't marry you. Oh, I've done such a hateful thing. You know, that first day when you lifted the kettle off the stove for me and tied up my finger!"

The professor nodded.
"Celia said you'd never noticed any girl so much before, and we—we deliberately planned for me to make you—make you like me. At first it was just for a joke, you know, but afterwards I began to—care for you, and then I wanted you to care for me and I tried harder than ever to make you. And now that you've done it, don't you see that I can't marry you, for you're only caring because I made you, and how do I know that it will last?"

Poor Kitty was sobbing outright now. The professor looked quizzically at her bowed head and heaving shoulders.

"Would you mind telling me?" he said, "just when you began trying to make me care?"

"The—the first night when you came out into the kitchen, after dinner."

"Then," said the professor, "you began too late by, I should judge, about seven hours. By that time I was trying to make you care for me. Did you never little Kitty, hear of love at first sight?"

"Really?" said Kitty. "Oh, really?"

"When I lifted the kettle off the stove and you thanked me," said the professor, "the mischief was done. Dear, do you want it undone?"

"Oh, no," said Kitty.—Pearson's Weekly.

PEACE AND WAR!

Blue the sky, in golden glory,
Rides the sun right overhead;
On the desert, still and gory,
Lies a hero who is dead.
With his face towards the foe,
He received the cruel blow.
And the world will never know
How he died!

In the garden bright and sunny
Plays a child with drum and fife, Gallant little Captain Bunny.
Such a happy, joyous life!
He's a soldier, like his daddy,
One day will to battle go;
Play on, then, you little laddy,
Some day you must sorrow know.
While you play, on desert sand,
With a broken sword in hand,
Gone to answer God's command,
Lies your daddy!

NOT A CLOTHES PEG.

Peggie Newton had been a faithful household drudge for years, and not grumbled much when her wages were occasionally passed over; but as time went on, and her salary fell more and more into arrear, she ventured to ask for something "on account."

"Why, haven't I paid you your wages lately, Peg? How careless of me," her mistress said. "I'm sorry I have no money in the house just now; but here's a smart cloak that I've ceased to wear, and which is only a wee bit out of fashion. You'll take it in lieu of wages won't you?"

"No, ma'am, I'm sure I shan't," said Peg, wrathfully eyeing the faded old cloak. "A peg I may be by name, but I won't be the sort of peg that people hang cast-off clothes on—not if I know it."

stirring constantly, into the oyster liquid. Have ready beaten the yolks of three eggs. Take a cup of the soup from the fire, and beat it gradually into the eggs, and beat them into the soup in the saucepan, season, and serve at once.

Salsify Fritters.—Scrape the stalks of a bunch of salsify, and grate them fine. Make a batter of two eggs, a gill of milk, and enough flour to make the batter of the desired consistency—about two tablespoonfuls, slightly salted. Stir in the grated salsify, and drop by the spoonful into deep boiling lard. Cook to a golden brown, then drain in a hot collander, lined with tissue paper, to free the fritters of superfluous grease.

Old-Fashioned Spider Cake.—An old-fashioned spider cake is really a milk biscuit dough baked or panned in a spider; the spider is a heavy iron skillet or frying pan with three short legs; a century ago it had also a heavy lid made with raised rim so that coals could be heaped on it. Then, with fire below and above it, the cake or biscuit cooked as readily as if in one of our modern ovens. In camp or when without such a cover, the spider could be propped in front of the fire, the blaze and open heat helping to brown the top. Take one quart of sifted flour; sift and mix with it two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a scant teaspoonful of salt. Rub in two large tablespoonfuls of butter or any shortening and wet to a dough with sweet milk. Roll out in a round sheet which will fit in the spider or in any thick-bottomed frying pan. Grease the pan, lay in the cake, and stand over a moderate fire, covering the top to keep in a part of the heat. Watch closely and do not let it cook too fast. When browned evenly on the under side, which should take fully 20 minutes or more, slide the cake out on a cake pan, then carefully reverse and slide it back in the spider, covering as before until browned. Serve hot with plenty of butter.

STRAIGHT TALK TO HOUSEWIVES.

The astonishing thing to me in many of the farm homes which I visit is the indifference to unpleasant or positively offensive odors around the house or out-buildings, writes B. W. T. Housewives who are models of neatness, whose nest, and climbed up alone with the object of capturing the young birds. About thirty yards from the nest he laid down his rifle, which hindered his movements. As soon as he reached the nest, in which were two eagles, the parent birds swept down from a neighboring height and fiercely attacked him. For twenty minutes a desperate struggle took place, Hess defending himself with a knife, expecting every moment to be swept off the ledge. At last Hess succeeded in killing the male bird and its mate flew away. Hess, though bleeding from severe wounds, arrived safely at Engelberg several hours later.

The albatross has been known to follow a ship for two months without ever being seen to alight.

Queen Maud has the reputation of being the wit of King Edward's family. On one occasion she was with her sisters at a public function and noticed a curious Pressman gazing at their every movement. Accordingly, she wrote something on a piece of paper, and, making a pretence of handing it to one of her sisters, dropped it. The reporter, of course, in great glee, picked it up, expecting to get a great scoop for his paper. Imagine his chagrin when he found written on it the commonplace remark: "My new boots pinch me horribly."

Sir James Vaughan, the well-known London magistrate, upon his retirement said his mind had become so blurred with the thousands of cases he had tried that he found it impossible to collect his ideas and reminiscences. "If I had only known shorthand," he observed, "what a readable book I could have written!" One rather amusing occurrence is well worth relating. A young and presumptuous barrister was disputing with Sir James regarding a certain matter. The magistrate maintained that his point of view was the correct one, whereupon the barrister exclaimed: "In that case, then, I am a liar!" "Well," remarked Sir James Vaughan, as he smiled sweetly over the court, "it is scarcely for me to contradict a personal statement of that kind."

one-third to one-half of the food value of the whole plant, making corn fodder not only a filler, but a nutritious forage.

Checked corn harvested late, with few leaves and heavy stalk, the substance of the plant having gone into the ear, possesses little feeding value from the roughage it furnishes. While the ear corn it contains is fresh and highly relished, a cheaper method of harvesting the grain would be by husking. Corn growing an abundance of forage with ears choked to half their normal-size by thick planting, cut and cured properly, gives a forage relished and cleaned up well by stock. Under such circumstances, practically all of the value of the green fodder is available as feed in the dried product.

It requires a large amount of care and labor to secure the year's supply of roughage in fine condition. The same amount of work spent in the harvest of the corn plant that is spent on other forage crops would give corn fodder a feeding value much higher than generally supposed.

A comparison of corn fodder with hays most commonly found gives it many points of advantage. Timothy, without question, is our most expensive roughage. Its freedom from dust, however, recommends it to the horseman. Otherwise, the yield is so light that for general use it is too costly. Even clover gives a light yield in comparison with corn. However, its high protein content, namely 6.8 per cent., is a redeeming feature. Corn fodder yields from two to three times as much dry forage as the hays, making its economy apparent at first sight.

FARM NOTES.

Cover up the grindstone when not in use. There is something about the heat of the sunshine that hardens it and spoils its grit.

There is nothing which more accurately gauges the thrift of a farmer than fields clear of weeds, and there is nothing that so widely advertises a farmer's want of proper pride in his calling as a place overrun with them.

There is no life which holds out so much in the way of comfort and independence to the man of average ability as that of the farmer; nor any business which in the long run will bring more sure returns. Those who hear of good incomes in the towns see only one side of the picture. They do not see the cramped house wedged in between others precisely like it, where the front view shows a sky line of red brick and chimney tops, and the rear a line of ash barrels.

Where live stock is kept fences ordinarily are necessary. The cost of a fence may be reduced by economy in the construction of a fence which promises some permanency. The farmer probably cannot produce or grow any part of the fence in paying quantities except the posts. This he can do often to his advantage for the posts constitute a considerable part of the expense. Steel posts have proved very expensive, nor has experience shown that they are durable in all localities. The cement post is partly an innovation, and while the claims for its durability are hardly verified as yet, this will also prove expensive at present prices of cement where gravel and sand are not at hand. A durable wooden post is still the best adapted for the widest range of service.

KING ALFONSO'S MAD BULL.

Not only is Alfonso King of Spain, but he is also supreme head of some thirty odd principalities. Being a posthumous child, he was indeed King with the first breath he drew. King Alfonso is a splendid shot with rifle and pistol. His nerve and excellent marksmanship stood him in good stead some two years ago, when, with a shooting-party, he was returning to Madrid. As they were walking along the road a savage bull in a neighboring field suddenly made a rush at the boy-monarch. Those with him were momentarily panic-stricken. Not so Alfonso. Quickly raising his gun, he laid the beast low with one well-directed shot.

BABY CONVICTS FATHER

SCRATCHED A MATCH ON SEAT OF TROUSERS.

Impulsive Act of Child Aroused Suspensions and Finally Led to a Confession.

By going through the motion of striking a match on the seat of his substitute for trousers, William Brutus Martin, aged 17 months, convicted his stepfather, Harry Yeatsman, of arson. The extraordinary testimony, given by a baby, who cannot talk, against his stepfather, was submitted to a jury in the High Court at West Reading, in England, and was so convincing that Yeatsman changed his plea to guilty, and the jury, without leaving their seats, sentenced him to serve twenty years in prison.

The charge against Yeatsman was that he set fire to his house, a small two-storey frame affair in the outskirts of Reading, in one of the workmen's colonies, while his wife, Sarah Yeatsman, was sick and asleep in one of the upper rooms, and the case of the Crown against him rested entirely on circumstantial evidence, supported alone by the evidence of the baby who could not talk.

WIDOW HAD LIFE INSURANCE.

Yeatsman, a Londoner, appeared in Reading about three years ago and secured work as driver of a cab for a company. After about a year and a half he secured lodgings in a house owned by Mrs. Martin, then a widow of a few months with a baby in her arms. She had come of a family of farmers near Maidenhead, and her only experience in city life was in Reading as the wife of Job Martin, an oil and color man, who owned a small shop and did a fair business in the sale of paints and oils and brushes and in decorating houses.

Martin's death left her with about $200 in cash, her little home, and a small amount left over from the sale of the shop after his debts were paid. Also her life was insured for $800 in favor of her baby, that it might be cared for in case she died, and—as it developed later—her little home was insured for $1,500 against fire. This, however, she did not know, being ignorant of business affairs.

Within a short time after Yeatsman came to lodge at the cottage of Mrs. Martin he began to take quite an interest in her—and in her affairs. He aided her in some small business matters pertaining to the final settlement of her late husband's estate. He examined her late husband's papers, explained their meaning to her, and assisted her in other ways. It appears also that among the papers Yeatsman discovered the fire insurance policy and the life policy.

A BRIEF COURTSHIP.

The attentions of the cabdriver to the widow grew bolder. She was a handsome girl, and, being country bred, knew little of the wiles of a London caddy; so, after a brief courtship, they were married, and Yeatsman promised to care for her child as if it were his own.

After they had been married about five months Mrs. Yeatsman became ill suddenly. Her malady was not serious, but she was confined to her bed, and while she was in bed and asleep one Sunday afternoon the house caught fire. Yeatsman, hearing the baby in his arms, rushed from the blazing cottage and cried that his wife was asleep upstairs, that the stairs themselves were ablaze, and that her escape had been cut off.

That she would have perished seems certain, but at that instant Ned Tetcom, a gasfitter, climbed upon the porch of the cottage and, taking a short run, the claim that day, as he had planned to do. Instead he reported to the company's lawyer, who, after a conference with the police, secured the arrest of Yeatsman.

The case was called before a jury, and the crown made a strong circumstantial case against the accused. The jury was taken to the Yeatsman house, the baby was placed on the floor of the living room, and the judge, at the suggestion of the crown's lawyer, mentioned the word fire, speaking the word plainly. The baby at once went through the pantomime and the court returned to the courtroom.

Before any further testimony could be heard Yeatsman asked permission to change his plea. The jury was instructed to return a verdict of guilty, and a sentence of twenty years' imprisonment was handed down.

"He did it exactly as I did," said Yeatsman. "He's a smart little beggar, and he remembered everything even how I scratched the match on my pants. I'll bet, though, if he knew he was sending his new dadda up he wouldn't have done it."

DEEDS OF ROYAL PEOPLE

KINGS AND QUEENS HAVE PERFORMED HEROIC ACTS.

King of Portugal Rescues a Wayfarer—His Queen Has Saved Many Lives.

Don Alfonso's recent courageous act in stopping a runaway horse in the Rua da Magdalena, Lisbon, reminds one that this is not by any means the first time a Royal personage has gallantly risked his own life to save that of one of his subjects.

It is not many years since, when driving in his capital, the King of Portugal saw a burly highwayman in the act of robbing and knifing a wayfarer. Before the rascal had time to escape the King had jumped from his carriage, struck him to the ground with his stick, and pinned him there while his coachman and footman secured his hands and feet. On another occasion King Carlos, who is a magnificent swimmer, jumped into the River Alcantara, rescued a drowning man just as he was sinking for the last time and brought him safely ashore; and, again, when he was witnessing a bullfight, he leaped into the ring and distracted the attention of a fierce bull just as he was about to gore a fallen toreador.

Not less brave is King Carlos's beautiful Queen, who has probably saved more lives than any other Royal lady in Europe. Once she plunged into the Tagus and, battling with the strong current, rescued two children from drowning; and on a more recent occasion she saved a fisherman who was drowning in a rough sea off Cascaes—a feat which nearly cost her her own life, and in recognition of which the Kaiser presented her with the German medal for saving life.

Curiously enough it was near the same spot that Carlos himself was rescued when a boy. Near the fortress of Cascaes, on the Atlantic coast, is a chasm, known as Hell's Mouth, in which the waters of the Atlantic form seething whirlpools. Just beyond the chasm the young Carlos and his brother were bathing one day when they were caught by a wave which would certainly have swept them into the chasm had it not been for the presence of mind and daring of Queen Maria Pia, their mother, who rushed into the sea and saved her sons from destruction.

ANOTHER ROYAL LIFE-SAVER

is King Oscar of Sweden, a man of enormous strength and absolutely fearless. His Majesty was walking in the streets of Stockholm one day when he saw a couple of runaway horses, attached to a carriage in which were a lady and her daughter, racing madly in his direction. The coachman had lost all control of the maddened animals and a terrible catastrophe seemed inevitable. As the horses drew near the King walked towards them and, with a leap, flung himself at their heads, seized the reins, and, after being dragged some distance, brought them, trembling and subdued, to a standstill. For this deed of heroism he received the medal of the French Humane Society.

The late King of Denmark performed a similar heroic act, to which there was an amusing sequel, by stopping a runaway cab-horse in the suburbs of Copenhagen. When the cabman realized that the danger was passed he turned to his rescuer and said, "I don't know who you are, sir; but I shall be proud to drive you home for nothing." "Thank you, my friend," was the smiling answer; "I think I had rather walk."

Interesting Gossip About Some Prominent People.

President Roosevelt and his wife can lay claim to a distinction which is enjoyed by few married couples. They were companions when they were tiny children.

Mme. Patti, who is a marvellous specimen of well-preserved powers, attributes her exceptional health to plenty of sleep—nine hours. Another celebrity who believes in that amount of slumber is Lord Avebury. Brain-workers need at least nine hours' sleep, he maintains.

A notable Welsh preacher is the Rev J. Puleston Jones, M. A. He has been blind since he was two years old; yet he prosecuted his studies at a local school and later on at Glasgow University. Subsequently he became a scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, where he graduated with honors in the School of History.

Lord Kitchener's father, who was rather a Spartan parent, was also a soldier, but in Ireland he turned his attention to breeding pigs as a source of income. Kitchener and his brother had to drive the pigs to market. They were sent off without breakfast, and had to do without that meal on their return if the pigs remained unsold.

Lord Kitchener once disguised himself as a native slave, in order to attend a meeting between a treacherous chief who pretended to be siding with the British, and the envoys of the Mahdi. He got back to camp by a clever but risky dodge of causing himself to be arrested as an Arab spy. Lord Kitchener used to be a great man at "making up" in his scouting days, and, of course he knows all the ins and outs of the native dialects and habits.

The Emperor of Austria belongs to that category of persons who throughout their lives never even suffer from headache. The approach of age is not visible. This miracle may be explained by his manner of life. The Emperor, who formerly smoked ten to fifteen strong Virginia cigars daily, now contents himself with two light ones; he drinks daily about two glasses of beer and some light wine; he sleeps much and great care is taken during his sleep that cold is avoided. His Majesty has lost only three teeth.

It was shortly before his marriage to Miss Alice Roosevelt that Congressman Longworth was quite unexpectedly presented at a reception to Mr. Samuel Longfellow, a brother of the poet Mr. Longworth, be it remembered, is nothing if not a modest man, and he was just then in a somewhat unsettled condition because of all the notoriety showered upon him by an inquisitive daily press. He did not know what to say, and so he said only, "Our names are almost similar, aren't they?" Mr. Longfellow smiled kindly. "Yes," he quickly quoted: "worth makes the man and lack of it the fellow."

The athletic career of Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, better known as Lady Constance Mackenzie, has been full of glittering feats. In America she played polo with men, riding astride. In Somaliland she rode inland in a soldier's grey shirt and khaki trousers, and was only turned back by the military authorities for fear the Mullah might swoop on her. She can ride and drive most creatures that are put to saddle or harness. She is, in short, a lady of great beauty, vivacity, and spirits, and looks extremely well in kilts of Mackenzie tartan, which, until her marriage, at least, she usually affected in her Highland home.

The Empress Charlotte, who has suffered a painful accident from a fall, takes, like the Empress Eugenie, an Imperial title from an empire which no longer exists. Her story is the sadder of the two. Married as a girl to a gallant Austrian Archduke, her happy days were passed in that white palace of Miramar which hangs over the Adriatic. Then her husband's ill-star made him Emperor of Mexico, and after four years of an uneasy State a firing-party be ablaze, and that her escape had been cut off.

That she would have perished seems certain, but at that instant Ned Telcom, a gasfitter, climbed upon the porch of the cottage and, taking a short run, leaped across the intervening space, clung to the window sill of the second storey window of the Yeatsman cottage and, after a brief struggle, drew himself inside. Once there, he fought his way through the smoke, carried the unconscious woman to the window, and dropped her into the arms of the man waiting below, then jumped to safety.

INSURANCE MAN SUSPICIOUS.

Naturally, Telcom was the hero of the neighborhood. The fire department extinguished the blaze after the house was badly damaged, neighbors took the family into their homes, and the incident seemed closed. It might have been but for the insurance adjuster, who, the day after the fire, made an examination of the premises. Yeatsman already having filed his claim. The insurance man's suspicions were aroused when he discovered that the insurance was paid up by the first husband and that the wife knew nothing of it. He discovered also, from talking with Telcom, that Yeatsman had thanked him suitably, and seemed sorry his wife had been saved.

It developed that the fire started in a closet under the stairs, and as there was no fire in the house, no electric wires, or combustibles in the closet, the origin of the blaze was a mystery. One of the firemen said he smelled oil when he first got into the house.

The strangest feature of the case was added by Mrs. Yeatsman, who, ignorant of the suspicions against her husband, said she was not overcome by smoke at all, but was entirely unconscious, although unable to move when the fire started. She said her husband had given her the medicine a short time before. She had dozed off immediately, and was awakened by the smell of smoke, but was powerless to move and seemingly unable to think clearly.

BABY SHOWS HOW IT WAS DONE.
Yeatsman himself said he was lying down on the sofa in the living room, and the baby was playing around the room, when he smelled smoke, and, opening the door into the hallway, discovered the closet ablaze and the fire running up the stairs. He had grabbed the child and raised the alarm immediately.

The insurance adjuster incidentally discovered that Yeatsman had made arrangements to buy two cars and cub horses, and that he had no money beyond his wages.

The circumstances were suspicious, yet there was no evidence against the man—at least not enough to convict—but the insurance man was not satisfied. He delayed settlement and kept up his investigation, pretending to Yeatsman that it was only necessary red tape. He was aware that the evidence of the man who smelled oil and of the wife being drugged could not be supported convincingly.

He called finally, after weeks of delay, at the house, which had been repaired. Yeatsman was out, and he was asked to wait. Being a man of family and a lover of children, he put in the time playing with little Bill Martin, a sturdy small boy, who was just learning to talk, but who could run all over the neighborhood. Mrs. Yeatsman was with them in the living room, and she mentioned the fire. At the word fire the baby, who was playing on the floor, suddenly jumped up, ran to the door leading into the stair closet and, lifting his chubby leg, went through the motion of striking a match, throwing it into the closet, and shutting the door.

TWENTY YEAR SENTENCE.

"What does he do that for?" asked the agent.
"I don't know," said Mrs. Yeatsman. "He does that every time we speak of the fire, and yesterday when he did it Mr. Yeatsman got so mad he slapped the poor baby hard."

The insurance agent did not settle the importance, the eagerness to listen is increased tenfold. Upon such a theme Sir Oliver touched at a recent lecture in University College, London. How to deal with the able bodied people, mental and moral invalids, who are unable or else unwilling to direct their own lives; life's failures, the sad wreckage of modern civilization, that was the subject.

The lecturer took the illustration of workmen who enter a factory to take advantage of the organizing and administrative capacity of its head. On this analogy he considered the poorhouse, stripped of its stigma of disgrace and deterrence, should be made not merely a place for maintaining the impotent and aged in instruction and discipline for able-bodied wasters and failures.

By drifting under the organization and discipline exercised by the community they would acknowledge failure of a sort; and just the same disgrace, neither more nor less, would attach to them as that which attaches to a man who fails in business. Whether it was their own fault or their parents', or the fault of social conditions, Sir Oliver would not have us stop to enquire, but simply to imitate the wisdom of the medical profession, which does not seek to blame, but seeks wholeheartedly to cure. They are to be regarded as the patients of society, who, in their present state, are useless, and very possibly deserving of blame, but the one great urgent fact about them is that they have failed and need help.

In answering the question what sort of help is to be given them, the lecturer did not think it must be merely material help, though doubtless that would have its place. The chief need would be intellectual and moral help. They must be shown how to live, how to work.

20 TONS OF MANNA.

Drop From Heaven in Turkestan to Great Awe of Villagers.

Samples of red manna, of which over twenty tons have just fallen from the skies in Turkestan, to the superstitious awe of the natives, reached the London Daily Mirror recently.

A Constantinople correspondent who sent a parcel of this remarkable substance, states that the manna fell in a district almost bare of trees, and that it was eagerly collected by the poverty-stricken villagers, who ground it into flour and made cakes of it. Ignorant of its perfectly natural origin, they regarded it as a gift from heaven.

As a matter of fact, manna is the result of the burrowing of a certain worm in trees. It is a regular article of commerce in the east, the manna ash tree being cultivated in Sicily.

But the manna that has just created so profound an impression in Turkestan is not quite the same. A high authority on Biblical natural history informed the Daily Mirror that the specimens were the work of a worm that only produces the substance under certain climatic conditions, which only obtain about once in every fifteen years. These worm-casts, when dry, are very light, and in the present case they were probably caught up by a whirlwind and carried away to a great distance.

The falling of a dense shower of these edible casts would naturally be regarded by the natives as a wonder.

"It is possible that the Israelites experienced this while wandering in the desert, and although the cause was perfectly natural to them it was in effect a direct interposition of Providence in their behalf."

The word "manna" means in Hebrew "I know not." In Turkestan the word has a similar meaning.

In Australia manna is obtained from a eucalyptus tree. It was formerly used medicinally in children's ailments.

Needles used to be made of bone, ivory, wood, and bronze. Needles made of steel were first used in Britain in Queen Elizabeth's time.

Twice at least the Dowager Empress of Russia saved her husband's life. Once, it is said, she saw on the Emperor's dressing-table, and, on picking it up, found that it was unaccountably heavy. Her suspicion was aroused, and carrying it into her own room she placed it in a basin of water and sent for the Prefect of Police. An examination of the case proved that it was a most ingenious infernal machine of terrible power.

One evening when entering her husband's study the Empress heard a slight noise which she could not explain. With remarkable presence of mind she asked the Emperor to come with her to the nursery to say "good night" to the children, and as he left the room she locked the door. She communicated her suspicions to the Captain of the Palace Guard; the room was entered, and it was discovered that the lurking assassin had made his escape through the window.

It was to the presence of mind and to the brawny arm of Prince George of Greece that the present Czar undoubtedly owed his life fifteen years ago. The Czarevitch (as he then was) was riding in a jinrikisha at Kyoto, in Japan, when a fanatical native policeman attacked him furiously with a sword. The Czarevitch jumped down and tried to escape, but his assailant pursued him, and was on the point of dispatching him when Prince George, who had rushed to his rescue, felled the would-be assassin with a crushing blow of his stick.

ARMY'S RELIGION.

Secretary of War Haldane's Effort to Make it Creedless.

Mr. Haldane, the British Secretary of War, is making an effort to introduce into the army the principle of "undenominational religion," of which so much has been heard in connection with the debates on the Educational Bill.

The plan which Mr. Haldane has prepared with this object was detailed by him recently in opening the extensions recently made to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home in Eccleston street, Piccadilly.

In a reference to the undenominational character of the work of the home, he said he agreed in thinking that men did not wish to be dragged into any particular creed.

"We have chaplains both in the Army and Navy," he continued, "but those chaplains are attached to particular denominations. With the Chaplain-General to the Forces I have been trying to devise a new element in War Office organization which may enable these representatives of varied creeds to recognize the breadth and reality of the common foundation of the work of all religions on which they meet."

"We have determined—we passed a proposition the other day—to form, as part of the regular organization of the army, a committee which shall look at the spiritual interests of the Army on a broad and comprehensive footing, on which all the churches shall be represented, and on which distinguished laymen who take, as I take, a strong view of the meaning and reality of these things of which I have spoken shall come also."

"The Chaplain-General will preside over the committee. Lord Roberts has agreed to join it, and I am going to issue invitations to some of my friends here and others that the churches generally may be brought together on the committee."

"This is an experiment. We shall see what comes of it, but I have deep confidence in that broad, common reality which underlies this view of things, and which aims simply at making things better for the soldier and sailor."

From an account of his career in one of the Sydney papers, it appears that he has been blind from birth; nevertheless he is a good player of chess and draughts, is a first-class swimmer, row's well, and is fond of sport of various kinds, including cricket and football. He plays the piano and possesses an excellent baritone voice. His sense of locality is said to be something extraordinary. For the brilliant success with which he went through the Arts and Law courses of the Sydney University he was much indebted to his mother. He is wonderfully expert with the typewriter.

TO ATTAIN OLD AGE.

General Booth Gives Several Pithy Precepts for Guidance.

Seven pithy precepts for the attainment of old age were given recently by General Booth, of the Salvation Army, in explanation of his surprising activity and vigor at the age of seventy-eight. He said:—

"Eat as little as possible. The average man eats too much. Instead of nourishing his body he overtaxes it, compelling his stomach to digest more food than it has capacity for."

"Drink plenty of water in preference to adulterated concoctions. Water is a wholesome nourishment."

"Take exercise. It is just as foolish to develop the mind and not the body as it is to develop the body and not the mind. Perform some manual labor; dig, walk, chop wood, or, if you can talk with your whole body, why, then, talk; but do it with all your might."

"Have a system, but do not be a slave to the system. If my hour to rise is 8 a.m., and at that time I haven't had sufficient rest, I take longer time."

"Do not fill your life with a lot of silly and sordid pleasures, so that when you come to die you will find that you have not really lived."

"Abstain from indulgences which overtax the body, and injure not only yourself, but the generations that come after you."

"Have a purpose in life that predominates above all else, that is beneficent to those about you, and not to your own greedy self alone. If there is one thing for which I am glad, it is that I have found a purpose which involves not me alone, but all humanity."

PROFESSIONAL TOOTH-STAINER.

The trade of tooth-stainer, followed in Eastern Asia, is as old a calling as any. The natives prefer black teeth to the whiter kind, and the tooth-stainer, with a little box of brushes and coloring matter, calls on his customers and stains their teeth. The process is not unlike that of blacking a boot, for a fine polish is given to the teeth. The pigment used is quite harmless.

PEOPLE WHO LIVE IN NESTS.
Probably the lowest type of man is found among the bushmen of Australia. They are so primitive that they have no idea of building even the most rudimentary form of hut or shelter. Travellers from this part of the world tell wonderful stories of the nest-building people who inhabit the wilks. They find whole families of them nesting in the thickets like our ground birds, though their nests are not constructed so carefully and artistically as those of our feathered friends.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN LOW

HE WAS KNOWN AS THE DEVIL OF THE ALABAMA.

Acquired a Captain's Certificate Before He Was 21—Sunk by the Kearsarge.

The death recently in Liverpool of Captain John Low, at the age of seventy-one, recalls the stirring events connected with the famous privateer Alabama, and the American Civil War. Captain Low was a native of Aberdeen. Adopting a nautical career, he obtained a captain's certificate before he was twenty-one. Proceeding to America, he joined the navy of the Confederate States. Meantime the Alabama, a vessel of about 1,000 tons, had been constructed at Laird's Yard, Birkenhead, and was acquired by the Confederate Government. Captain Low was one of those sent to man the vessel, his position being chief officer. The Alabama was launched on May 15th, 1862, and her completion hurried forward. Certain suspicions as to her real purpose began to be talked about. As the result of a judicial inquiry the British Government telegraphed to Birkenhead to have her detained, but they were a day too late, as she left the Mersey twenty-four hours previously. This was on July 29th.

NUMBER INSTEAD OF NAME.

The vessel left Birkenhead without a name, there being only the builders' number, "220," on her. She proceeded to the Madeira Islands, where she took on board guns and ammunition from the steamer Bahama, sent from Liverpool for the purpose.

These were entered on the Bahama's papers as cargo, though they included two 30-pounders, with gun-carriages. Captain Semmes and other officers were on board the Alabama. Having thus been equipped for fighting, the privateer sailed forth on August 28th in her true colors, with the name Alabama painted on her bow.

Captain Low kept a log of the stirring events which followed. One entry described how, before they parted company with the Bahama, Captain Semmes mustered his crew, and having read the orders from the Secretary of the Confederate States' Navy, gave any of the men who so desired the option of returning to Liverpool with the Bahama. Few drew back.

A FRIGHTENED PORTUGUESE.

While the Alabama was being coaled, two Portuguese officials, with a file of soldiers, approached her in a boat. Captain Low thus described the incident: "The two officials came on board, but the men who carried guns were compelled to wait in their boat. One of the officials was a thick, stout, little man with a large head and round shoulders. He became very much alarmed, more especially when he looked round and saw that we had cannon mounted, and by looking at he could see the gunner with his mate loading Enfield rifles and revolvers. He commenced talking Portuguese very rapidly, and became very doubtful about going any further on the deck, and seemed to be only anxious to jump back into his own boat."

The narrative adds that the British Consul came on board and told us we had caused a great deal of excitement on the island, the people believing we had come to take the place.

LOOKED UPON AS PIRATES

The subsequent havoc played by the Alabama on the commerce of the Federal States, the sinking of one of their gunboats by her off the coast of South America, her ultimate destruction by the Federal man of war Kearsarge off Cherbourg, France, on June 19, 1864, and the protracted negotiations which ended in the British Government paying a heavy indemnity to the United States.

THE TRICKS OF THIEVES

HOW SOME CRIMINALS BETRAY EACH OTHER.

Scheme of a Trio of Cardsharps to Do Another Out of His Money.

Some curious revelations as to the loyalty of criminals towards each other have recently been made in a London police-court. It was alleged by the prosecution that a gigantic forgery plot had been concocted, by which banks and private individuals had been defrauded of large sums of money, and one of the supposed conspirators was brought out of gaol to give evidence.

In a calm and business-like fashion the convict remarked that though one of the coups initiated by the gang was a complete success, resulting in a haul of over $1,500, she reported to headquarters that it had failed to come off, and by this simple device was enabled to escape sharing the plunder with her associates.

A curious case of a trio of cardsharps "doing the double" on another was related to the writer not long ago. The victim had, by the exercise of his "talents," acquired a large sum of money. He was accordingly approached by three other scoundrels, with the pleasing information that they knew of an Australian millionaire, recently arrived in London, whom it was advisable to "rub down"—i.e., relieve of his money by trickery. Would the moneyed "sharp" join with the other three in performing the operation?

CERTAINLY HE WOULD!

And all arrangements were made accordingly. The Australian was to be challenged to a quiet game of poker, and all would be well.

The originators of the nefarious little plan explained that the millionaire was to be allowed to win at first, so as to give him confidence; the rooking to begin at a given signal. As only one of the party—the sharp first mentioned—had any money, it was arranged that he should lose to the Australian till a sufficient degree of confidence was established, his losses to be refunded to him when the victim's money had been won and the sharing-out took place. Well, the game began, and, according to instructions, our friend with the money steadily allowed the Australian to win. When nearly all he had passed into the possession of the latter, a strange thing happened.

The Australian gasped, gurgled, dropped his cards, and fell to the floor in a fit. A doctor was called, the unfortunate millionaire conveyed to bed, and the party separated for the night. Not till some time afterwards did it dawn on sharp No. 1 that the "Australian millionaire" was also in his line of business, and that the whole comedy, fit and all, had been arranged for the purpose of getting his—the sharp's—evil-earned cash.

In Ireland the informer has been of the greatest use to the police. How many people have heard of the Irish conspiracy to steal the famous which forms the seat of the Coronation Chair, from Westminster Abbey? This mad-brained project was elaborately prepared. Men were sent from America to work in conjunction with the Fenians in London, ample funds were provided, and the plot excited great enthusiasm.

It was arranged that some of the conspirators were to secrete themselves in the Abbey, overpower the police during the night, and pass out the stone through a window to colleagues stationed outside. The plot would inevitably have been carried out but for the unusual informer.

"From information received," detectives surrounded the Abbey, and the

LOTS OF WORK FOR THE LIVER.

Manufacturer, Scavenger, Filter, Life Preserver and Closed Door.

The business of the liver is to manufacture antidotes for poisons. It is a rendering establishment to which the little corpses that accumulate in the body are carried to be destroyed, just as in cities dead animals are gathered up by a scavenger and converted into useful things.

All the corpuscles of the body die every six weeks. Every second of our lives something like eighteen million of these red cells have to be disposed of, and the liver does part of the work of grinding them up and working them over into something useful.

The red corpuscles have potash in them, which is used for making bile. The bile is a kind of lye for making soap in the small intestines. The soap, like all good home made soaps, is disinfected; it is a splendid antiseptic and germicide.

The coloring matter is carefully saved out of these red cells, and sent back into the body to be used for dyeing the hair, tinting the skin and painting the dark chambers of the eye where the photographing is done.

If the liver does not do this work as efficiently as it ought these little corpuscles accumulate in the body. In other words, the body becomes a sepulchre and we carry about with us dead things that should have been discharged from the body through the bowels, the kidneys, the skin and the lungs, and should have returned to dust again.

The liver is a closed door which keeps poisons out of the rest of the body. The kidneys, skin and lungs are open doors to let the poisons escape from the body. When there comes such a flood upon the liver it cannot keep the door shut; it is forced open a little way and lets the poisons through into the blood.

Then the blood is not purified, the impurities go through and the body becomes filled with them. The brain becomes confused, dull, stupid, and the man feels bilious; the poisons get into the muscles and he feels weary and worn out; they get into the nerves and he has sciatica or lumbago; the nerve centres get irritable and inefficient and there is nervous exhaustion and perhaps melancholia.

All the food taken into the stomach is filtered by the liver before it is ab-

WHITE BEAR MINE.

The superintendent reports during the month of August 214 feet of development work was done in the mine. Of this 97 feet were driven, extending the north and south drifts on the No. 3 ore body on the 850-foot level. Thirty feet were drifted in No. 4 ore body on the 850-foot level. Twenty-five feet of this drift was in ore of shipping grade. The ore was four feet wide, and the smelter returns averaged between $16 and $18 to the ton. 33 feet of drifting was done on the seventh floor of No. 3 ore body on the 850-foot level. Seventeen feet in length of this ore is 16 feet wide and the rest is 10 feet wide. The ore still continues in the face of the drift. Smelter returns show a gross value of between $16 and $19 to the ton. A raise was made for 25 feet on No. 2 vein, 850-foot level. Two veins of ore were found here, varying in width from six inches to eighteen inches each. These veins assay about $37 a ton. The ore still continues on and up. Nine feet were driven north on No. 3 vein, 700-foot level. The whole face of the drift was shipping ore. The east drift on the 1,000-foot level was extended twenty feet. The Superintendent concludes:—"The outlook of the mine is very good." Smelter returns from August shipments netted the company over $10 a ton. The President of the company, Mr. Thomas Mills, has been in Rossland during the past ten days, and has written that he has examined the workings, and that he is very much pleased with conditions as he found them, and that the mine would be on a permanent shipping basis before the first day of March next.

MUSICAL WALKING STICKS.

Among the queer instruments in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, are a cane violin and three cane flutes. The former is a peculiar, narrow instrument of small size, but perfect in every detail, made in imitation of a walking-stick and furnished with an ornamental knob handle. The strings are held by small iron pins and are turned with a key. When not in use a small bow slips within the stick and a round cover, held by metal bands, conceals the clever little instrument. The length of the violin is 2ft. 11in., and its greatest width is 1 1/2in. It is a German conceit, and dates from the nineteenth century.

Alabama on the commerce of the Federal States, the sinking of one of their gunboats by her off the coast of South America, her ultimate destruction by the Federal man of war Kearsarge off Cherbourg, France, on June 19, 1864, and the protracted negotiations which ended in the British Government paying a heavy indemnity to the United States, are all matters of history.

Captain Low frequently entertained his friends with tales of these stirring times. He stated that though the passengers and crews of vessels captured by the Alabama on the high seas were always treated with the greatest courtesy, there were some who looked upon them as pirates, and there was a general dread lest they might fall into the maws of her cruiser. Their surprise was great when they found on board the Alabama a courtesy and kindness reminiscent of a British or American liner.

PANIC-STRICKEN PEOPLE.

On one occasion the passengers on a captured vessel were very much alarmed, and Captain Low on going into the cabin found the women and children much scared. He succeeded in pacifying them, and they soon began to have the greatest confidence in him. On another occasion when the passengers were going away they begged Captain Low to give them some memento of their experience.

Captain Low was a fearless man, facing danger with such stolidity that he came to be known as "the devil of the Alabama."

On returning from the sea Captain Low went into business at Liverpool, and devoted his spare time to charitable institutions connected with the mercantile marine.

FUR ANIMALS IN CANADA.

There is no Sign of Exhaustion of the Supply of Skins.

American Consul Gabriel Randal of Dawson City, furnishes an interesting report of the fur trade of Northern Canada. He believes there is no immediate danger of fur bearing animals being destroyed and declares there are vast unexplored regions in which fur bearing animals abound. He writes:—

"Inasmuch as Northern Canada is frequently designated as the last great fur preserve of the world, it is worth while to study the character of the supply in these parts, its permanency, as well as the number and proportion of the skins obtained. Complete statistics are not available. However, some light is thrown upon the subject by a table, purporting to show the annual sale of the Hudson Bay Company. Large quantities of furs reach the market through other channels.

"For more than two centuries the fur trade has been vigorously prosecuted in Northern Canada, and yet the supply, save in the case of two or three varieties of animals, shows no formidable sign of exhaustion. The buffalo, whose hide was once an important article of commerce, has disappeared before the advance of civilization, the beaver can apparently only be saved from a similar fate by extraordinary measures of protection, so, too, the fur seal of the islands and waters of the Pacific. Sea otter and silver fox have been rare for many years. Fur buyers seem to agree that the fur bearing animals of the north, with the exceptions noted, are not playing out. Vast extents of territory still remain approximately virgin and unexploited, and Indians are proving surprisingly careful in preserving game."

CURIOUS CAUSE OF BUSH FIRES.

The remarkable discovery has been made that many of the recent great bush fires in New South Wales and Victoria were caused by the phosphorus paste used to kill rabbits. The paste is laid down by the ton in all the rabbit-infested districts. As soon as the mixture dries it catches fire under the heat of the sun's rays and starts disastrous conflagrations.

in the Abbey, overpower the police during the night, and pass out the stone through a window to colleagues stationed outside. The plot would inevitably have been carried out but for the unusual informer.

"From information received," detectives surrounded the Abbey, and the whole thing ended in smoke.

It is only fair to say that occasionally one meets with shining instances of loyalty among criminals. For instance, at the trial of the forgers, Edward and Maud Willing, in London, the male prisoner did all he knew to shield Mrs. Hughes, the woman through whose instrumentality were obtained the signatures it was desired to forge. The notorious French criminal known as the "Mouse" was arrested outside Mazas Prison, whither he had gone to convey food to one of his pals who was confined therein. Had the "Mouse" been content to leave his friend to his fate, he himself might have got off scot-free.

WALTZING FOR FOURTEEN HOURS.

The Italian champion waltzer, Signor Guattiero, recently offered $200 to any dancer who should succeed in outwaltzing him. Five competitors took up this new challenge—three Frenchmen, one Italian, and one Russian. The match took place at the Tivoli-Vauxhall dancing-hall in Paris, when Signor Guattiero easily won. He started dancing at half-past ten in the morning, and waltzed for fourteen consecutive hours. Signor Poli-Luigi played the piano during the whole time, performing fifty-four different waltzes.

man feels bilious; the poisons get into the muscles and he feels weary and worn out; they get into the nerves and he has sciatica or lumbago; the nerve centres get irritable and inefficient and there is nervous exhaustion and perhaps melancholia.

All the food taken into the stomach is filtered by the liver before it is absorbed. That is why one can, with apparent impunity, take such things as tea and coffee, whiskey, beer, tobacco, etc. All these impurities are passed through the liver before they get into the general circulation. If they should go straight to the brain of the drinker would die shortly after taking his glass of whiskey.

When the liver is plump and healthy, full of glycogen made from the blood, it has a wonderful faculty of destroying poisons; but a starved liver cannot do this. That is why a glass of whiskey taken before breakfast does a man twice as much harm as if taken after breakfast.

A dose of medicine on an empty stomach is much more powerful in its effects than a simple dose taken when the stomach is full, for the reason that a full stomach furnishes the liver with material which it makes use of to fight poisons.

knob handle. The strings are held by small iron pins and are turned with a key. When not in use a small bow slips within the stick and a round cover, held by metal bands, conceals the clever little instrument. The length of the violin is 2ft. 11in., and its greatest width is 1 1/2 in. It is a German conceit, and dates from the nineteenth century. Like the cane violin, the cane flute is also of German make, but it dates from early in the eighteenth century. The flute is in C, and is made of a light wood, ornamented with turned bands of the same color, and finished with a knob. The lower joint is solid. It has six finger-holes and one flat brass key. The instrument is blown at the side like the transverse flute, and is an excellent sounder. It is 3ft. long, and it requires a close inspection to see that the cane contains a flute.

NOVEL RAILWAY TRAIN.

At the close of a banquet given by the Maharajah of Gwalior to the Prince of Wales, a centrepiece in the form of a temple and decorated with electric lamps and flowers was hoisted to the ceiling by pulleys, and revealed a perfect model railway on the table underneath. The locomotive and train were 8ft. long, and carried decanters, cigars, cigarettes and matches. The train was started by closing an electrical circuit. As long as this was closed by a spring the train moved, but the lifting of a decanter or box of cigars resting on the spring allowed the spring to act, thus breaking the circuit and stopping the train.

WE RECOMMEND

White Bear Mine Shares

THIS MINE adjoins (please note adjoins) The LeRoi—and is in a fair way now to repeat the history of that famous mine—About 250 tons were shipped (taken out in course of development only) in August—netting after paying for all transportation and smelter charges about TEN DOLLARS per ton.

The management, directors and shareholders deserve the greatest credit and the fullest measure of success for their persistency and courage. Do you realize what "Repeating the History of Le Roi" means? FIGURE IT OUT:

$100 Invested in Le Roi at 50, now worth	$ 20,000
500 Invested in Le Roi at 50, now worth	100,000
1000 Invested in Le Roi at 50, now worth	200,000

You can buy the non-assessable White Bear now on the open market at about 70c per share. Send for reports and particulars and judge whether it will likely sell for one dollar per share in the near future. You are the architect of your own fortune—only the "might have beens" and "has beens" rate dolefully of LUCK in others. Use your own judgment, investigate and MAKE YOUR MONEY WORK.

THE BEST FLOUR.

DAFOE'S NONESUCH
DAFOE'S MANITOBA PATENT

By numerous tests by the best Bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best Flours in the market.

When buying Flour ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing Bran and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually, when it reaches you, of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the mechanic sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to buy Flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sell you an inferior Flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

CHOICE CORN MEAL and BUCK-WHEAT FLOUR always on hand.

FEED GRINDING a specialty, with the best feed mills known to the trade.

A full stock of the best ANTHRACITE COAL. Also in the market for the purchase of all kinds of Grain.

GRAND JURY PRESENTMENT.

The Grand Jurors of our Sovereign King Edward VII of this Court of Assize beg leave to report as follows:

That we feel much indebted to your Lordship for the lucid manner in which in your charge you set before us our duties as Grand Jurors.

That we join with your Lordship in congratulating the residents of this county in the absence of any serious crime.

That we have visited the goal and find everything in good condition as far as the duties of the Governor are concerned.

Your Grand Jury would recommend that the furnishings of Jury room be improved and that ink and writing materials be supplied. The chairs are better calculated for bar room furniture than for a Jury room.

We would also recommend that Electric Light connection be made with the jail as fixtures are installed and everything in readiness for the current.

All of which is respectfully submitted
Dated at the Grand Jury room at Napanee this first day of October 1906.

A September Bride.

A very interesting event was the marriage on Tuesday of last week, at Centreville, of Miss Jane Dewey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dewey, Croydon, to Patrick V. Whelan, son of the late Thomas Whelan, of Napanee, but now of Fernie B. C. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McCarthy in the presence only of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The bride wore her travelling dress of Scotch grey, pleated skirt and smart short coat, with this was worn a white silk blouse, and jaunty Rob Roy hat in grey, caught at the sides with natures feathers. Instead of the customary bouquet, the bride carried a pearl Rosary. The bridesmaid was Miss Scanlin, Enterprise, becomingly attired in grey, while Mr. J. E. Scanlin acted as groomsmen. After the nuptial High Mass was celebrated, the party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful pearl and garnet ring, to the bridesmaid, a dainty pearl brooch, and to the groomsmen a pearl tie pin. Mr. and Mrs. Whelan go to Toronto, take the boat to Fort William, thus breaking the long journey by rail. They will spend a few days in Winnipeg on their way to the farther west where a comfortable home awaits them.

DESERONTO ROAD.

The steam engine belonging to Mr. Davis, en route for William Joyce's, met with quite a serious accident. In crossing the bridge near Robert Birrell's house the engine took a turn for the south and the railing not being sufficiently strong, it went into the ditch, however after some delay and expense the engine proceeded west and they are now threshing at Mr. Joyce's. They have several jobs in the neighborhood now waiting for them.

The following from this road attend the Pictou Fair. Mr. and Mrs. John Hudson, sr., Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hudson, Mrs. Wm. Hudson, Mr. S. Sager, Mr. and Mrs. F. VanVlack, Percy and Lulu VanVlack, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Oliver and Miss Gerty Bowen.

Miss Emma Walker, of Thurlow visited last week at Mr. Levi Sager's. She was accompanied by her little sister Olive.

A. S. KIMMERLY pays highest price for choice Timothy Seed. Plenty of Bran and Shorts in stock, Liverpool Sax Salt, and fine barrel salt on hand. Cheap Sugars bought before advance. Five Roses Flour has no equal. Try our celebrated 25c. Tea.

LAPUMS WEST.

On Oct 2 death again visited our midst and this time claimed one of our most respected young people in the person of Miss Carrie Brown. She was 23 years of age and had been a sufferer for the past three years from a lingering illness. The funeral took place on Thursday from her late residence here to the Wilton Methodist Church where the services were conducted by the Rev. R. A. Wattam, after which the remains were interred in the Wilton Cemetery. The family at home have the sincere sympathy of everyone hereabouts.

Mrs. Wm. Gibbens, of Watertown, is spending a couple of weeks visiting her brother, Mr. H. E. Bush, here and elsewhere.

Wm. Lapum is staying at Levi Salisbury's, Bethel, for a few weeks.

Mrs. F. Brown and Miss Florence Joyner, were calling on friends at Thompsonville on Tuesday.

Mrs. William Love is improving quite nicely after being confined to her bed for several days from the effects of a severe fall.
